

fence of intolerance, in defence of "the right divine of kings to govern wrong."

"What the Bible teaches as a whole—what the Bibles also teach as a whole—for History and Conscience and Nature and Experience—these too are sacred books—that, and that only is the immutable law of God."

"Now if the doctrine of endless torment, with all its Calvinistic and popular accretions, be true, it is incredible that there should be no trace of it in the entire Old Testament."

Rev. H. N. Adler : "Of this you may be quite sure—that there is not a word in the Talmud that lends any support to that damnable doctrine of endless torment."

The Chief Rabbi, Michel A. Weill, in his elaborate work, Le Judaïsme les Dogmes et sa Mission, distinctly decides that the doctrine of endless torment is Scripturally untenable.