SHAKESPEARE.

The Immortal Bard.

There is no authentic account of who painted this picture. It was purchased from the collection of Lord St. Leonard. It is unquestionably a contemporary painting, and was considered to be of such importance as to be exhibited in the National Portrait Exhibition in 1865, whilst in the possession of Lord St. Leonard. The late Mr. Graves placed high value on this painting as being of great historic interest. It was hung in Shakespeare Home at Stratford-on-Avon until the death of Mr. Henry Graves.
