

it would be attended with the happiest success.*

This plan they strictly adhere to in the United States; no master is there permitted to open a school, without he appears, by a proper scrutiny of his abilities, to be a qualified person. If this plan was proposed here, it would, I think, meet with encouragement, and I for one would raise my voice and loudly exclaim

A M E N.

* Does not experience justify the truth of this observation? there are three very recent occurrences, which cannot possibly be yet obliterated from the minds of the public.

The allusion is this—within the course of these two or three last months, three men, who acted in the capacity of schoolmasters in this Province, were obliged to flee into the States, on account of their bad conduct, viz. one for robbing a gentleman of some dollars, another for * and a third for embezzling a certain quantity of wheat, &c.
