DYSPEPSIA.

Full and proper nutrition depends upon the action of the stomach. If the action of the stomach be wrong, the best of food cannot properly nourish the body, while with a healthy stomach even coarse food furnishes strength and vigor to the body. With good food and good digestion the highest health is obtained, pure blood is formed, and disease quickly cast off. The grand secret of life and health rests, therefore, in good digestion making pure blood. To secure these requisites the use of B. B. B. is indicated wherever dyspepsia or impure blood are present, and there are but few who do not suffer either occasionally or chronically from these complaints. Prominent symptoms of dyspepsia are variable appetite, faintness, heartburn, sour stomach, nausea, headache, dizziness, fluttering of the heart, coated tongue and bad taste in mouth, costiveness or diarrhoea alternately, low spirits, tired feeling, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters is guaranteed to cure dyspepsia in any form, having cured cases of twenty-five years' standing which had resisted all other treatment.

Merry Xmas.

GENTLEMEN,—A Merry and a Happy Xmas to you, for I have to be thankful for my happiness this Xmas to your B. B. B. I suffered for a long time in England and this country from dyspepsia, but thanks to your wonderful Blood Bitters I am in perfect health to-day, and have recommended B. B. B. to my neighbors. In gratitude to it I never lose an opportunity to praise it, and shall, if possible, never be without a bottle in the house.

MRS. SARAH IRELAND,
Binscarth, Man.

Severe Suffering Stopped.

DEAR SIRs,—I was troubled with dyspepsia for six years, and tried several remedies without relief. Four years ago I procured a bottle of B. B. B. from your agent, Mr. John Pearce, of Parry Harbor, and received so much benefit from it that I considered myself entirely cured by it. I took a return of the symptoms five or six weeks ago, when I got another bottle, part of which I took, and am now so well that I deem it unnecessary to continue the medicine, as I feel as well as ever I was in my life, which I attribute solely to the use of B. B. Bitters. The truth of this statement can be attested by Mr. John Pearce and others in the neighborhood.
