MUNICIPAL SELF-INSURANCE.

The London (England) County Council is one of the public bodies which sees fit to take risks with the ratepayers' property which its individual members would never think of taking with their own. The Council's self-insurance funds, it is stated, amount to £163,870. Commenting upon this, the London Review remarks: "This is called insurance, but it is the insurance, which does not literally and actually insure. On the face of it, there appears to be no finer proposition in the world than municipal self-insurance, but it has been proved by hard facts to have been a great fallacy, and, sooner or later, the London County Council will learn the bitter lesson that has had to be swallowed in other parts of the world. The sum of £163,870 might easily be swept away by one outbreak, for municipal buildings are no more exempt from the general risks of fire than any other. And if the "nest egg" is smashed at one fell swoop, any excess of that sum involved comes, of course, out of the ratepayers' pockets. The councillors seem quite willing to put public money and property to a great risk which in managing their own private property they would never run. Only by a world-wide distribution of the risks can fire insurance be made to cover every possible eventuality."

The Canadian Surety Company will make application to Parliament, at its next Session, for an Act to amend its Act of Incorporation, to enable it to transact the following additional classes of business. Automobile Insurance; Accident Insurance; Sickness Insurance and Fire Insurance.
