We believe there is no subject on which the average pathmaster and farmer is more ignorant than on the proper construction of country roads; for the road beds in this part of Ontario are a disgrace to our boasted civilization, and our opinion is, after years of careful study, that more than one half of the statute labor is practically thrown away from ignorance on the part of those in authority, as to the proper manner to build or repair our common roads. Captive Animals Receive No Meat on Sandays, Only Milk.

Trained animals do not like Sunday.
One would naturally suppose that on that day, when they do not have to go through their paces in the big ring in the arena, and show off to an audience what they can do but his confortably in their cages and sleep, that they would enjoy themselves very much better than on any other, but such is not the case.

case. Sunday is medicine day. Any one who knows anything about a lion will acknowledge at once that to get one of these animals to take a nostrum is simply out of the question. The sense of smell with the lion is in a very simply out of the question. The sense of smell with the lion is in a very high state of development, and, no matter how subtle the physician may be, medicines are hard to get down a lion's throat, if not actually impossible. Professor Darling, who is perhaps one of the best informed men at present on the question of hons, was found stroking one of his brute's manes through the bars of the cage the other day, when he turned and said:

"Did you ever see a lion drink?"
Now the popular idea is that a lion eats, but does not drink. No one ever heard of any one else ever telling about a lion drinking. No one ever associated drinking with the lion, yet the lions do drink, and Sunday is drinking day. It is the one day of seven that they take off and devote to drinking, but at the same time it is the one day of seven that they devote to fasting.

Said Professor Darling: "From Saturday afternoon until Monday night my lions aever get one bite of food. This may appear on the surface very cruel; it may look as though they were half starved, and to many who imagine that we overfeed our animals it may look like a horrible prevarication, but it is a fact nevertheless. Each lion during the week is fed once a day. This feed is given them directly after they have finished their work, never before, and it consists of a chunk of meat weighing twenty pounds.

"After I have ended my performance of Saturday night after the performance of the surface of the performance of the surface of the performance of the surface of the performance of the performance of the surface of the performance of the surface of the performance of t these animals) and still have them looking so well.

"Would you like to see the lions drink?" he said, turning to me, and, never having had that opportunity, I naturally said "Yes."

The big, brawny keeper was called, and an order given for some milk. The lions when they are about to be fed jump over each other, rush around, and make a great fuss to get their various pieces of beefsteak, but when the milk came in they seemed to look at each other with an expression of "Well, here it comes again!" and there was no particular hurry as to who would first begin to lap the milk.

About a quart and a half of rich milk was set down to each of the five brutes, and slowly, seemingly reluctantly, they got up and began to drink it. There was a great deal of difference between the little red tongue of the pussy cat, which daintily laps up milk from a saucer, and the great rough tongue of the king of beasts that went at their medicine. They seem to go at it more as a prest of durity than as a metter of durity than as a meter of durity the as a meter of durity than as a meter of durity than as a meter of medicine. They seem to go at it more is a matter of duty than as a matter of a matter of duty than as a matter of ste: yet in a very few moments after te dish was put in front of them it was puty. Still, there was no clamoring or any more, but they turned over, oking drowsily at their keepers, as if say: "Well, we did it because we anted to; not because you wanted us do it."

o it." That," said Professor Darling, "is all "That," said Professor Darling, "is all the medicine my animals ever get. At times I have attempted to put a small amount of sulphur in the milk, but the animals do not take it. Too much meat would completely upset the system of a lion just as it would a man.

Colors from Coal-tar.

Writing about that marvellous color producer, coal tar, a writer in Longman's Magazine reminds us that it is only thirty-six years ago that Perkin "rathered up the fragments" in coal-tar and produced the beautiful mauve dye. Now, from the greasy material which was considered useless is produced madder, which makes coal-tar worth £100 a ton. This coloring matter alone now employs an industry of two millions sterling per annum. One tone of good cannel-coal, when distilled in gas retorts, leaves twelve gallons of coal-tar, from which are produced a pound of benzine, a pound of benzine, a pound of toulene, a pound and half a pound of anthracene for dyeing purposes. According to Roscoe, there are sixteen distinct yellow colors, twelve orange, thirty red, fifteen blue, seven green and nine violet, besides a number of browns and an infinite number of blendings of all shades.—New York World.

gulations to carry out the findings of the Paris tribunal affecting Behring Sea interests.

Secretary Carliale received the party in his private room of the Treasury building. Behind closed doors the conference was conducted for two hours, during which time Commander Evens, of the navy, who was in command of the United States fleet in Behring Sea in 1898, was called into the conference and participated in it.

At the conclusion of the conference Secretary Carlisle stated that a general interchange of opinion as to the scope of the instructions to be given the United States agent on the seal islands, and to the naval officers in the Behring Sea fleet took place and a better understanding of the sitnation and conditions was reached. The limit of catches allowed the North American Commercial Company has not yet been fixed by the United States. It is understood that they will be within the next few days. It is understood that another question discussed was from what point in the Pribyloff islands, the sixty-mile zone established by the Paris tribunal, should be measured, as the islands are a number of miles apart and oblong in shape, ranging in length from 10 to 20 miles.

the law"—
"But what of the deer and dog?"
"Gimme time. Well, sir, that buck had been skirtin' the lower side of the hill,
an' came to the crossing near my shanty.
As I opened the door he made a shigh an'
a pow'ful leap, the houn' springin' into the air at the same time. At this moment, when both were in the air, the cold wave coming over the hill struck

An actor happened to be passing—a light comedian was he—and going up to the victim of the misstep, remarked with feeling: "Isay, old man, will you teach me that trick? If I could make an entrance on the stage that way, it would bring down the house."

The other heard only the last words, and turned a sadly surprised face toward the actor, "D—didn't the house come down, after all?" he asked, in amazement. Speckled Beauty.

Mr. Chas. Steele St. Catherine's, Ont. "C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"For a number of years I have been troubled with a general tired feeling, shortness of breath, pain in the back, and constipation. I could get only little rest at night on account of the pain and had no appetite whatever. I was that tired in my limbs that I gave out before half the day was gone. I tried a great number of medicines but did not get any permanent relief from any
