You have all heard of King Edward VII., who died a few weeks ago.

Do you know anything of King Edward I?

There never was a more famous war rior than that King Edward, for he be gan to win battles when he was only 15 years old.

Ingland, he lost a battle, and, what was worse still, he was taken by the soldiers belonging to the other side. And these soldiers kept Prince Edward—for he had not got to be King then, remem-ber—with them and watched him always, so that he could not run away.

Prince Edward, however, made a plan
one day. He said to the attendants who were keeping watch over him: "This is such a fine after noon that I should like to have a ride into the country."

The attendants were quite willing to go, so the horses were got from the sta-bles, and away the party merrily rode across the fields and over the hedges. By and by they came to a field which was very flat, and Prince Edward said: Let us stop here and have some races with our horses.'

For the remainder of the afternoon therefore, race after race was run, and the attendants got very excited, and each was eager to show that the horse which he had was better than any of the others.

Now, during all this time Prince Edward did not race his horse at all, but he just sat quietly on its back and watched the others race their horses. And when at last the party began to ride back home again the horses of the attendants were very, very tired, and could only go slowly.

But Prince Edward's horse was not tired, and all at once he dashed away as fast as his horse could gallop. He met a party of his friends, who were waiting for him behind some trees, and they all galloped away.

The attendants went in pursuit, but could not catch them. Indeed, the attendants could do nothing but look at one another and pull long faces, and think how clever Prince Edward had been.

LA MODE

It is Short Step From the Original to the Bizarre.

Wet are driven to ask ourselves som mes, both in our theatres and in the fashionable gatherings where the leaders of the Mode mast do congregate, how far our love of originality eccentricity will lead us, writes our Paris correspondent. The other day I saw a very elegant woman wearing a hat with aigrette of which came down over her shoulder, twisted fiself round her neck and finished under her chini. Some toilettes we see are trly excessive in their fancifulness and seem to have been designed by a caricaturist rather than a couturier. Certainly originality is to be encouraged; but between tasteful individuality and a "getup" which makes the wearer resemble an African princess is a wide step. The other evening at a rehearsal at the Folies Bergeres one of our most popular actresses appeared with a headdress consisting of four green feathers stuck in her hair a la sativage and falling down to her eyes in front. of the Mode mast do congregate, how fa

BILL AND HIS WIFE (Cleveland Plain Degler.) this is a true story.

Bill is known everywhere as a "goo fellow." He has his faults, but his heart is in the right place—that's what everybody says. Nobody ever came to him for help and got turned down. He had a family; none of our crowd had ever seen his family, but we knew he must be good to them ever them. must be good to them, even though never did appear to go home.

One evening five or six good fellows were sitting in the back room of a downtown saloon, and Bill was telling A woman entered. She had a dark shawl over her head and we couldn't see her face, but she come directly to our table. "Gentlemen," she said, "Christmas is coming, and I have nothing for the little ones. Can you help?"

Of course it was Bill who responded first. He jumped up and plunged his hand into his pocket. We could hear the rustle of bills, and we knew that ething more than mere silver had found its way into the trembling hand. Bill was blushing when he came back to us. We were shamed into offering to us. We were shamed into offering something, but he would have none of it. He seemed confused —a little ashaued of his charity — but he wouldn't let us help. And it was just like Bill to change the subject and go right on with his story.

And the woman? Oh, that was Bill's wife Weight of the story.

13 Months' Suffaring

Paris, Ont., Oct. 21st, 1909.

"I wish you to put my letter on record for the sake of suffering humanity. I have suffered 18 months with Muscular theumatism in my back. I have spent at deast $20.00 on pills and liniments during that time, but nothing would ease me of the pain,—in fact it was a chronic pain. For those long 18 months it stayed right with me, sometimes convulsive and cramp-like, causing me to groan and cry aloud. Every moment was torture. I could not turn in bed without yelling out. Now I will always bless the day when I first started to rub in, and to take internally "Ner-viline." After using four bottles, my pains have left me. I shall always take off my hat to "Nerviline" and can honestly say it's the poor man's best friend, ecause it will always drive away from you the Demon-Pain. Yours truthfully,

A Cheerful Old Friend on the Thane

That the getting of wealth is a very different thing from the getting of wisdom has been shown once again, and once again by Mr. Andrew Carnegie. He has placed in the hands of twenty-four American trustees, with Senator Elihu Root at their head, the sum of two millions in 5 per cent. bonds, with the general instruction that the annual interest, a hundred thousand pounds—it sounds more in dollars—is to be devoted to hastening the abolition of international war. Mr. Carnegie does not say how it is to be devoted to have the same times and the same times and the same times are the same times and the same times are the same times and the same times are the how it is to be done; the twenty-four trustees are left to invent methods. And that is not all. When internationaly revenue is to be applied to alleviating and eliminating the "next most degrad-ing evil" suffered by man. Might we suggest that future Carnegie trustees "when war has been abolished," will de quite as wisely to attempt to "abolish' the war between the sexes or to eliminate the taste for blood from carnivora, or to train America to believe that man cannot live by success alone? Futility can no further go. O that men should put dollars in their pockets to steal away their brains!—From the Saturday Boxing.

"A talk with any smaggler who ever encaged in the business of bringing Chinese into the United States contrary to the immigration laws will suffice to establish the Chinaman's proverbial ionesty in ousiness transactions, "said Guy E. Runyan, of Detroit.
"I know of one old French Canadian who in his younger days was a professional smuggler and operated on the Canadian terder. He did not deal in fursior any articles of commerce, He made a practice of smuggling Chinamen across the border, and according to his own statement amassed enough money to set himself up in a comfortable business.

"He has often said that the duty of a professional smuggler ended when the Chinaman was leaded on the soil of the United States. There it was that the smuggler got his money. After that it did not fall to him to look out for the Oriental who had been his charge. Ninetynine times out of every hundred the Chinaman was apprehended and sent back to his former abode by the immigration authorities.

"Nevertheless the smuggler received his bay.
