BOILER EXPLOSION

Puts Saskatoon in Darkness and Cuts Off Water Supply.

Three Men Hurt—Newspapers Unable to Publish Last Evening.

Saskatoon, Sask., July 31.—Three men were injured, two seriously, and the city is in darkness indefinitely as the result of a boiler explosion at the city power plant early this afternoon.

The boiler had been leaking all morning, and power was shut off pending repairs, but the leak got worse, and the fires were ordered to be drawn. While being drawn a boiler tube exploded clouds of scalding water and superheated steam immediately enveloping the whole boiler room.

I. Sullivan, a coal wheeler, received the first blast, being blown over a coal pile, but luckily escaped with bruises and a scratched hand. Immediately after came a discharge with the combined force of the three boilers, which were connected, the centre being the source of the trouble, the whole force aggregating 450 horse-power.

Andrew G. Sangster, superintendent of power; Harry Johnson, chief engineer; and Jack Kemp were the three men involved, the first and second named being badly scalded all over the body. Johnson had the flesh scalded almost off both arms and hands, and Sangster was also terribly scalded. Both are in the city hospital, but their chances of recovery are not yet stated.

The explosion tied up the newspapers, which this evening were unable to publish. As the superintendent and chief engineers were injured and only subordinates left to handle the trouble, it is impossible to state when the plant will operate again, as the only means adopted for relieving the tension thus far has been the calling into requisition the services of the forty-horse-power city traction engine, ridiculously inefficient.

The city is devoid of water supply, and business in all shops operated by city power is at an absolute standstill.

DROPPED DEAD

Companions and Conductor Thought the Man Was Intoxicated.

Stratford, Ont., despatch.—Death came in sudden form to B. Plumb, home unknown, to-day, when he fell dead in No. 3 train from Toronto, which arrives here at 12:13 o'clock. Little is known regarding the deceased, who was about 35 years of age, save that he boarded the train at the Union Station, Toronto, along with one A. Watkins. The two men had applied for employment at the Grand Trunk Railway Employment Bureau, Toronto, and both were accepted as helpers and ordered to report at Stratford Grand Trunk Railway shops.

According to Watkins' story, four other men met Plumb and they all sat in the smoker of one of the coaches. One of the four had flasks of whiskey and Plumb drank freely and all appeared to be in the best of spirits. Between Haden and Hamburg he rolled off the seat to the floor, between two seats, but did not strike his head, sliding down easily. The conductor and brakeman, who witnessed this part of the tragedy, thinking the man was badly intoxicated, tried to lift him, but decided to let him lie there and told Watkins to help him off at Stratford.

On arrival here Watkins found that Plumb did not respond to him and called the conductor, who found the man was dead, and a will was sent to Coroner Montoith and Dr. L. Robertson.

Montreal, July 31.—"There is not enough military spirit in the young men of today," said Col. A. Bertram, of Dundas, Ont., who two years ago commanded the Bisley team, and who is at the Windsor Hotel.

"There is not enough money spent on the militia, and I think that Roberts and French were right in what they said."

CONFESSION OF A MURDERER

Young Bell Boy Tells of Killing Aged Wall Street Broker.

Intended to Chloroform and Rob Him to Get Money.

Chloroform Bottle Label Led to the Arrest of the Young Lad.

New York, July 31.—Paul Geidel, a 17-year-old bell boy—slight of stature, sharp featured, and with the smooth, sallow complexion of the youthful cigarette smoker—was arrested here early to-day as the murderer of William Henry Jackson, the aged Wall Street broker, who was found brutally killed in his hotel apartments on Forty-fourth street yesterday.

An hour after the arrest, Police Commissioner Dougherty and District Attorney Whiteman brought out from the room where they had been closeted with Geidel, a long, typewritten confession, which, they said, the lad dictated and signed, giving a full account of the crime. Robbery was the motive, according to the lad's statement, but the murderer got only $8 in cash, and a gold watch, which he pawned for $18 more.

Geidel was a bell boy at Mr. Jackson's hotel, the Iroquois, until last Friday, when he was discharged. He was without money. On going to his rooming place, he noticed a bottle of chloroform, which has landlady had purchased a few days before in order to kill painlessly an ailing pet dog. It occurred to him with to Geidel, the confession says, that he might obtain money by chloroforming and robbing the aged broker, who was reputed to carry large sums about with him.

The confession, as given out by the police, continues substantially as follows: "Late Wednesday night I entered the basement of the hotel and walked unobserved by the rear stairways to the tenth floor. I climbed into the bathroom of Mr. Jackson's apartment through a transom in the corridor. He awoke as I was preparing to drop the chloroform-soaked rag over his face, and instead of going unconscious at once with the drug, he began a desperate fight. I hit him hard in the face and he sank down helplessly. Then the chloroform did the rest. I went through the room and his clothes, took the little money he had and his watch and hurried out as I had time for. My clothing was badly stained, and I took it to a tailor to be cleaned. My soiled shirt I threw in a garbage barrel on a side street. Then I went home. I am glad now that it's all over. The suspense has been terrible."

The finding of the empty chloroform bottle in Mr. Jackson's apartment afforded the clue that led to Geidel's arrest. The label on the bottle had obliterated, showed that the chloroform had been bought by a Mrs. Kane of West Fifthth street, New York. Mrs. Kane admitted that she had purchased the chloroform and said that the bottle was in her bathroom. Later, when she looked at it she was startled.

"Why, Paul Geidel, one of my roomers, must have taken it," she said. "He was asking me about it the other day."

Geidel, who was in his room, was immediately arrested, after a little grilling by the detectives, and admitted the crime, saying that he had committed the crime.

SUDDEN END.

Miss Marie Hockey Expired in Swimming Tank at Woodstock College.

Woodstock despatch.—A sad accident, which resulted in the death of Miss Marie Hockey, of Waterloo, occurred this afternoon at Woodstock College, where the Young People's Missionary Conference is in session. Miss Hockey, a delegate, had been playing tennis, and, getting heated, went to the swimming tank about 3 o'clock with a friend, Miss Sadie Hutton, of Berlin. Miss Hockey went into about four feet of water, and though she acted peculiarly, her friend, who was not in the water, thought she was only playing. Suddenly Miss Hutton saw something was wrong and called for help. The engineer came and the body was taken from the bath, where it floated, face downward. Doctors were summoned immediately and artificial respiration tried for some time in vain, and she was pronounced dead. The doctors consider death due to heart failure or syncope, as no water appeared to be in the lungs. Miss Hockey was a capable swimmer, but Miss Hutton could not swim.

Deceased was the third daughter of Rev. J. E. Hockey, of Waterloo, and was a pupil at the Berlin Collegiate, and about 19 years of age, and a missionary enthusiast. Rev. Mr. Hockey arrived to-night to make arrangements for the funeral.

WANTS A FINGER.

Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, Ready to Pay Liberally For It.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 31.—Mrs. Reginald Waldorf, of Philadelphia, a wealthy young widow, an accomplished musician, is willing to pay several thousand dollars for a new index finger. She is here to recuperate from the effects of an operation by which her right forefinger was amputated after becoming infected by an accidental cut with a rusty knife. She appealed to Dr. Fred R. West, who has advertised for a finger. He named no price, but says his patient is willing to pay liberally.

Mrs. Waldorf feared that she could never play piano or organ again when she found that she must part with her finger. Now, however, she is taking hope. A plaster cast of the left index finger has been made and accurately dimensions taken, and Dr. West says he is going to find a finger.

Here is the kind of finger Mrs. Waldorf wants: Index finger of right hand; length, 3 inches, distance from finger top to palm; thumb joint, 27-16 inches; proximal joint, 2 3/4 inches in circumference; middle joint, 2 5/16 inches in circumference; distal joint, 1 1/16 inches in circumference.

LIFE SENTENCE.

Prisoner Gives Judge Whitford Tongue Lashing Before Receiving Sentence.

Denver, July 31.—Frank J. Henwood was to-day sentenced to the penitentiary for life for the murder on May 24 of George E. Copeland, whom he accidentally shot while firing at Sylvester Von Phul, in the barroom of the Brown Palace Hotel. Henwood arose, when asked by the court if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, and replied: "Judge Whitford, I have been for seven weeks in the county jail with over 100 prisoners. Every one of those men is afraid for his life to come before you for trial. You have the reputation of being a biased, prejudiced judge, whose only idea is to convict the men who are brought before you. I know and you know what constitutes a fair trial and I have not had that from you."

Henwood said he had been a true friend of John W. Springer, but yet the court permitted the introduction of improper evidence to show ill-feelings between him and Mrs. Springer in order to blacken his character in the minds of the jurors.

When Henwood had concluded his tongue lashing the court pronounced sentence, which is the extreme penalty permitted under the jury's second degree verdict. He will remain in the county jail, pending an appeal to the supreme court.

STUDENTS FAILED

Medical Students Who Passed Examinations Yet Plucked.

Medical Council Cannot Understand How That Should be.

Toronto despatch.—Spring examination 1911 results: Primary 83 57 36; Intermediate 195 96 109; Final 148 129 21.

This extraordinary statement contained in a report submitted to the Ontario Medical Council this morning by Dr. Lane, of Malloytown, made doctors from all over the province stare at one another in blank amazement. The College of Physicians and Surgeons now want to know the reason for this paradox—why a man should know so much and at the same time know so little.

Dr. E. Ryan, of Kingston, expressed the opinion that it was a condition of affairs which called for immediate action and suggested that some of the subjects in the medical curriculum were not properly taught in the university or that some of the examiners were not doing their duty. Students who are able to pass their final examinations were plucked in the intermediate and the percentage of failures in the intermediate this year was so large—over sixty per cent.—that an investigation should be made.

Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, concurred in this view and intimated that the intermediate examination might be eliminated altogether. Dr. A. E. Accol, of Belleville, thought there was too much theory and too little of the practical about the examination, and while the Medical Council was well able to look after its end of the examination he suggested that more practical work might be done.

Dr. Ryan, Kingston, thought the time had come when the student who had successfully passed his examinations should not be harassed and inconvenienced and his money taken from him simply because one or two examiners held certain views.

Dr. Jarvis, of London, said that one student who had been plucked in London came to him with a real grievance. He had failed in his examination but the examiners had written "very good on his paper."

On the motion of Dr. Edward E. King, the following committee was appointed to deal with the re-organization of the council: Dr. Ryan, Queen's University, Kingston; Dr. J. MacCallum, Toronto University, Toronto; Dr. MacCall, of Belleville; Dr. E. E. King, Toronto; Dr. T. W. Varden, Galt; Dr. James MacArthur, London, as territorial representative; and Dr. E. A. P. Hardy, Toronto, homeopathic representative.

DROPS TO DEATH.

Veteran Balloonist Killed While Turning Somersault in Air.

Chicago, Ill., July 31.—Harry Darnell, veteran balloonist, dropped 700 feet to death in the presence of 5,500 horrified men and women this evening during the holiday festivities at Electric Park, Plainfield, Ill.

Mr. Darnell's particular feat, as advertised, was not so much his ascent in the balloon as turning a double somersault while high above the earth and catching the crossbar of a trapeze by his toes.

Seated in the long hanging ropes high aloft could be seen the speck that the crowd knew as Mr. Darnell. The spectators caught their breath as they saw the body suddenly revolve twice in the air among the ropes.

Then something happened. The speck dropped to the end of the trapeze ropes, caught with one foot, hung there for a moment as the balloonist clutched wildly for a hold, and then shot like the stick of a skyrocket to the ground.

It was but a moment later that a crash and splash told that the body had fallen in the shallow water of the Du Page River, in the centre of the park. Several men waded into the water and pulled the limp body out two feet of mud in which it had been embedded.

Turns Down North Toronto Annexation Scheme—New Harbor Beard.

Toronto despatch.—By-law providing for expropriation of the Canadian Pacific Railway corner at King and Yonge streets received a six months' hoist, and Railway Company granted permission to proceed forthwith with the erection of its new office building.

Annexation of North Toronto decided against on a tie vote after long and acrimonious discussion, a motion that the question be referred back to the Board of Control being declared lost on the same division.

Controlle Church and Messrs. Lionel H. Clarke and R. Home Smith appointed as Commissioners of the new Harbor Board. Council reports adversely against the immediate extension of Victoria street to Charlton street.

The child has been in the hospital for several weeks in a most critical condition. The doctor's evidence showed that the child had thirty-three bad bruises on her body.
