

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 8, 1915.

Editorial Brevities.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the letter signed 'A Sufter,' in today's issue, and ask them to give it their very serious consideration. And we also respectfully commend its proposal to our town authorities. We would like to hear from other citizens on the subject.

The New Baptist Pastor.

Large congregations assembled at the Baptist church last Sunday to welcome the pastor, Rev. N. E. Harkness, on the occasion of his occupying the pulpit of his new pastorate for the first time. He was introduced to his people by Dr. G. B. Cutten, president of Acadia University, at the morning service, and responded graciously, thanking them for the cordial welcome which had been extended to him in Wolfville, and stating that he wished to move among them as a man, rather than a clergyman. The sermon, both morning and evening, was powerful with the fervor of divine truth, and from the viewpoints of oratory and rhetoric each was a masterpiece.

The text for the morning was from Hebrews 11:1—'Which we have as an anchor of the soul, a hope both sure and steadfast and entering into that which is within the veil.' Hope is one of the greatest factors in life. It lies at the basis of all human endeavor. But there are false hopes. Men need that hope which is behind the veil. We must anchor our lives to the spiritual. Our hope, in the great international crisis, lies in our faith in the over-rule of God. Christ is the answer to the prophetic cry of the human soul. 'The world is not getting away from God. Calvary's hill shall become the world's altar. This is the sure hope of all who have known the power of the indwelling Christ.'

The subject of the evening sermon was 'The Unconquered Kingdom,' the text, Hebrews 12:28. To day we are discovering those things which are permanent. The kingdoms of earth are being overthrown. The inner kingdom of the soul, fortified by the personal friendship of Christ, alone can stand the shock and stress of those days. It is the Kingdom of Christ within which gives man victory in his struggle with mortal evil.

Rev. M. P. Freeman offered prayer at the morning service. The choir, with Mrs. Richmond as director and Miss Rockwell organist, rendered beautiful selections. The morning anthem was 'My God and Father,'—Marx; that of the evening, 'The Lord is exalted,'—West. A quartette sang 'The mellow eve is gliding,'—Roberts, at the latter service.

The Halloween Outrages.

Sir,—Halloween is now approaching and with it the usual outbreak of mischief. It was one in various parts of the town, which, by timely police precautions, might have been prevented. It is not too much to say that the destruction of hundreds of dollars worth of property might have been averted by the expenditure, at most, of say, fifteen or twenty dollars by the Council in hiring a few special constables to patrol the streets after midnight, when all the real damage is done. It is, of course, impossible, for our worthy and efficient chief constable to afford any adequate protection, as no man can be in two places at the same time.

The rattlepatties of the town are surely entitled to some protection from the town authorities at a time like this.

The depredations of last Halloween night were a disgrace to a civilized community. Nobody objects to a little innocent fun on the part of the young people early in the evening. But when it comes to the wholesale destruction of property, the tearing down of fences, the wrenching off of railings, the carrying away of valuable articles and, perhaps, worst of all, the placing of obstructions on the sidewalks dangerous to life and limb, it is time that something were done by those responsible for the safety and well being of the citizens of this town. I have written in this early date because I hope others will take up the matter, and so draw the attention of our town authorities to what has for some years been a grand scandal and disgrace to Wolfville. Last year it reached a climax.

Yours truly,
A SUPPERER.

An exceedingly interesting number, from a Canadian standpoint, is the October Canadian Magazine. There are a number of unusually attractive contributions. 'Western Canada going dry,' by A. Vernon Thomas; 'Fortune of Enderby,' by Mrs. Arthur Murphy; 'Christ and Socrates,' by R. Goldwin Smith; 'The Ox' by Britton B. Cooke; 'Literature and Life,' by Harold Garnet Black; 'The Curious Case of Berj' min Mott,' by Irving E. Strathairn, as well as a number of good short stories.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life. If your work is tiring; if your nerves are sensitive; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions. It possesses in concentrated form the very elements which regenerate the blood, strengthen the tissues, soothe the nerves and build strength. Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it.

A Letter from the Front.

The following private letter was received two days ago from Captain Arthur Chute, who has been at the front since early last October:

Headquarters 1st Army, B. E. F., Sept. 21st, 1915.

Here's a reply to your lovely letter just received. To get a letter from home is the brightest spot of any day. During the past week I have had a good many exciting experiences. On Sunday I heard that the 25th Battalion of Nova Scotia were moving up country toward the trenches. I set out at 6 a. m. to find them. I went on horseback and was accompanied by Capt. Neley, one of our officers. It was a glorious day for a long ride, bright and clear, with a cool autumn breeze. We had lunch at the Headquarters of the 2nd Army, and rested our horses there for three hours. The town was full of staff officers of the 2nd Canadian Division. We learned that the 25th Battalion was encamped about three miles from the town, and about 2 p. m. we set out to find them. We were congratulating ourselves on our successful quest when we came upon the deserted camping ground. A Lieutenant Bullock and two soldiers were there guarding supplies. They told us that the 25th had broken camp and marched on early that morning. We ascertained their halting place for lunch, and, on arriving there, found the embers of their dying fires and a party under their pioneer Sergeant, clearing up the field. 'You'll find them going through the next town ahead,' said the Sergeant in that town a guard on points told us that they had passed through the town three hours before. The traffic here was so congested, due to proximity to the front, that our progress was very slow.

While passing slowly along, in the midst of a company of engineers, two closed in motor cars passed us. I saluted the first, and a fine looking old general inside gave me a most memorable smile. 'Who's coming next?' I said to myself, and then, on the next car, I saw the British flag meaning that the Field Marshall was inside. I got a swift passing glance at a very grey and rather stout General, whom I recognized as Sir John French.

I arrived at the field, where the 25th Battalion were to bivouac for the night, just about tea time. The men were all massed up along the side of the hill. They had just arrived and were engaged in stocking their rifles, and in disengaging their knapsacks and equipment.

I met Margeson, the Paymaster; Capt. Logan; Capt. Tupper, of Tupperville; Major Weston, of Dartmouth; Major MacKenzie, an Alderhot friend of mine; Capt. Medical, Lieut. Howard Johnson; Major Conrad; Lieut. Murphy, formerly of the 27th, and several other officers. Jack Stairs, Major Burns and the Colonel of the regiment had already gone into the trenches. I was very glad to see a chap named Brooks, a Baptist preacher, as a machine-gun officer. It was Sunday evening. Near by we could see the starlights rising from the German lines. Behind us a British Battery was thundering. As Brooks said on the ground with the rest of the officers he remarked that at that time at home he would have been just rising to preach an evening sermon. 'What an awful change,' he remarked. 'I thought of his church in Falmouth, and then looked ahead toward the trenches. It certainly was a change.'

I also saw a good many men of the Battalion. 'Are there any Wolfville boys?' I inquired, and out of the midst of one platoon came Karl Murphy. Karl told me that Bob Spicer was with them, and we went across to the horse lines to locate him. There were two refractory mules kicking and lashing in every direction, and there was Bob with a big stick, inducing a tame spirit into them. I saw Dr. Moore's son of Kentville; Corkum, who worked in the Bank of Montreal in Wolfville; a couple of boys from Cannings; and a chap named Dickie from Kingsport.

The 25th is a fine Battalion. The men made a splendid appearance, and they were evidently drilled right to the minute. In the morning when there was no breakfast for them on account of delayed transport, they went about without a murmur, and waited until dinner-time for their first meal. That evident patience is one of the best signs of discipline. The Battalion made a record in their long march from the Base to the Front. They came into their last position without a single straggler. I spent the night in Col. LeCain's sleeping bag, and next day, after seeing two companies of the 25th march off to the trenches, I mounted and set off for home 30 miles away, across in the area of another army.

Canadian Shirt Manufacturer Solves Shirt Problems.

Did you ever notice the irritating fashion in which your shirt sleeves persist in falling down on your soapy wrists and hands, while you are washing? Did you ever wish someone would get out a shirt with sleeves that would stay up when you wanted them to?

It has been done, and by a Canadian manufacturer—a well known house of Eastern Shirts Limited. Their new device, known as 'Sleeft', consists of a button-hole type, which, when pulled, raises the sleeve to the desired height, then is slipped over a conveniently placed button and keeps the sleeve up until released.

This improvement will be welcomed by men everywhere, for it not only means greater convenience while washing the hands, but will save laundry expense caused by cuffs getting soap-splashed and soiled, in many cases within a few minutes of putting on a clean shirt.

Eastern Shirts Limited also make a wide range of fine negligee shirts of the usual type; that is, without the new 'SLEEFT' device.

In the making of workmen's shirts, this firm has solved other problems. About a year ago they opened a new department for the manufacture of working shirts of higher quality than the usual garment of this kind.

Their shirts were made with special provision for overcoming some of the weaknesses in this class of garment. For instance, they found by careful investigation that working shirts generally break forth at the elbows. Prompt provision was made to safeguard against Eastern Shirts joining this, by the insertion of double elbows.

It was found, in some inferior makes, the low priced shirts were skimmed in material, and made too small for proper comfort and wear. Every shirt in the Eastern Shirts line, whether selling for seventy five cents or twice that sum, is made in size, and the line is appropriately named 'BIG-NUFF.'

Another feature in working shirts is their 'Hi-Lo' collar, a smart, comfortable idea, giving a much neater appearance than the old style, very low turn-down collar, which had come to be associated with working men's shirts.

Grooming the Horse.
Nothing contributes so much to the beauty and the lustre of the coat as grooming. As a consequence, the body of the horse receives much attention and the legs entirely too little, whereas the legs should receive the more attention. Thorough and rapid brushing of the legs in the evening will insure the horse coming out in the morning with complete absence of any stiffness in the joints. Again, horses whose limbs are thus cared for will remain comparatively free from the many diseases to which the legs and feet are subject. Thorough grooming in the evening is much more important than in the morning. There is no doubt but that proper grooming will greatly increase an animal's efficiency and prolong his usefulness.

A Kansas farmer who could not get harvest help put this notice upon the fence: 'Harvest hands wanted. Hired, girl, pretty and genial. Cabinet organ, music in evening. Pie three times a day. Three teaspoons of sugar with every cupful of coffee. Hammocks, feather beds or leather beds at your option for sleeping. Rising hours 9 a.m. Three hours rest at noon. Come one—come all.'

Mrs. Snooter—Men make me tired. Mrs. Swayback—What's the matter now?
Mrs. Snooter—My husband saw Mrs. Keedick yesterday and I asked him what she had on, and he replied 'O, clothes.'

Did you ever have a cold you could not get rid of?
No—If I did I'd still have it now.

Many women with disfigured complexions never seem to think that they need an occasional cleansing outside as well as inside. Yet neglect of this internal bathing shows itself in spots, and sallow complexions—as well as in dreadful headaches and biliousness. It's because the liver becomes sluggish and waste matter accumulates which Nature cannot remove without assistance. The best

CANADA'S FAVORITE DRUG STORES

More Than Good Looks

Taking care of your teeth means better health. Neglect of them leaves acids and hurtful germs of decay that harm not only the teeth but often seriously affect the throat and stomach. Proper care of the teeth means daily cleansing with something that will remove the acids and destroy the germs.

REXALL TOOTH PASTE

Does these things, we believe, better than any other dentifrice. It not only tends to preserve the teeth and keep them free from tartar and discoloration but it helps insure the health of other parts of the digestive apparatus. Also delightful to use.
