Net of St. Peter

From the earliest times the Vatican basilica showed to visitors on the feast of St. Peter a souvenir of the Fisherman of Galilee in a large net before the principal portal of the temple. The net was part of a chandelier in a circle of bronze from which hung lamps called silver "canistræ." This precious curiosity was carried off by the Saracens in 846 with other valuables of the basilica. But as the "Liber Pontificalis" attests, Pope Leo IV ordered another to be constructed in 853. The history of the net is told in the "Liber Pontificalis" under Pope Alexander III, the chandelier called the "great net" was held in veneration. This venerable souvenir savants and artisans have recently put their heads together to reproduce according to its traditional form. The result of their labors is the net of silver wire which is hanging in St. Peter's today. The new net covers a space of twelve square yards, and the wire of which it is composed runs into a length of 4,200 feet. Around the circle of bronze hang eighteen lamps—Corona Lunarium—showing the perpetuity of the tradition which the Church preserves at a distance of so many centuries.

The Power of Kindness

"What a dull dreary day!" How many times these words had been spoken, and how plainly were they expressed on the faces of the dozen passengers that afternoon. We were to change cars at this place, but on our arrival found that the train was two hours late, so there was no alternative but to wait. It was a cold, rainy early spring day; the streets were filled with mud, and a chilliness and gloom seemed reigning everywhere, even in the hearts and actions of the waiting passengers. No one seemed inclined to talk; so there we sat with long, sober faces, thinking what a dull, dreary day it was. Whilst we sat thus waiting, an old man entered the room, carrying in one hand a cane to support his feeble body, and in the other a basket filled with sundry articles for sale. He approached the passengers, one by one commending the usefulness, durability and cheapness of his goods, but no sale did he make. One said that he had no use for such things; another said that she was well supplied already; another that he did not care to bother with such articles while travelling, and so on, until the entire circle was made, and the manner of each one seemed to say to the old man that such an intrusion on his part was very unwelcome. He had turned away and was leaving the room, when a lady almost unnoticed before, approached him from a remote corner where she had been reading, and desired to look at his goods. She first invited him to a comfortable seat; and then selected one after another of the useful little articles, until five or six had been stored away in the satchel. In paying for her purchases the exact change could not be made, and several cents were due to her, but she told him not to trouble himself to get so small an amount; that the goods were cheap and well worth the money she had paid him. The old man's face had brightened up during the transaction, and he expressed his gratitude by saying: "I thank you, ma'am with all my heart, for this little trade. Business don't amount to much such a day as this; but I have to keep working all the harder for you see, we get hungry this kind of weather as well as when the sun-shines. 'Twas so wet and muddy that I didn't go home to dinner today; and trade was so dull I couldn't find to buy any; but I'll be all right now, for I'll go home an hour earlier tonight." He was again about to start off, when a lady asked him if he would remain seated by the stove for a few minutes until her return. She then repaired to a lunch room connected with the depot, and soon came back with a nice lunch and a steaming cup of coffee, and asked the old man if he would like a little refreshment before starting out in the cold rain. What a look of honest surprise and gratitude beamed on that face! He thanked her quietly, for he seemed too deeply touched by her kindness to say much more, and ate the luncheon with a hearty relish. When he had finished he approached where the lady was sitting and said: "You may be sure I won't forget your kindness. For I often think anybody takes any notice of a poor old man like me, and your kindness has warmed up the feelings of my heart as the coffee did my body. Good-bye. And may God bless you all the days of your life!" The little group of passengers had been silent witnesses of the scene; and, as the old man turned to go, a gentleman stopped him, saying he would like one of his picture books for his little boy. But this purchase extended to several articles, and some of the others, who had before refused to purchase, now bought quite liberally. After thanking his customers, the old man went on his way, much gratified at his liberality. What a change had come over that dark room! If a sunbeam had burst through the dark lowering clouds the effect would not have been greater.

The lady who was plain in her dress and retiring in her manner, resumed her seat in the remote corner. The gentleman who bought the picture-book approached her and said: "We are strangers, but I want to thank you for the good which the little sermon has done me." She looked at him in surprise as she asked: "My little sermon, did you say?" "Yes, I have been very regardless of the law of charity, but your action just now has brought me, I hope, a lasting lesson. Your kindness has done more than benefit its object, I am sure." The lady modestly replied that she had done no more than obey a simple impulse. But what a ray of sunshine it proved to those around! The mental clouds disappeared and a friendly conversation sprang up among the passengers. The time of waiting, that had commenced so gloomily, passed away in the most pleasant and cheerful manner, and we felt this was due to the power of one little act of kindness.

City of Lima

Lima is one of the strongholds of the Church. It is said that Toledo, Spain, is the only other city in the Catholic world which has more houses of worship, per capita, than the capital of Peru. From a high place their towers and spires are almost as numerous as trees standing in the forest. And they represent a great wealth. Time was when the church property constituted a seventh of the total valuation of the city and it must be nearly as much now. The Cathedral is a most stately edifice. It is old and gray, for the foundation was laid by the mighty Pizarro himself. It took ninety years to build in fact, the records show that it was more than a century before the imposing towers were completed upon the great foundations the iron-hearted conqueror laid down for them. The present Archbishop is the twenty-sixth in the line. The principal portal is the Door of Pardon. The large pedestal which crowns it bears the statue of St. John the Evangelist, the patron of the Cathedral. There is an eagle at his foot and a book and pen in his hand. The second door of the transept opens on the Court of the Orange Trees, which is precisely like that of the same name in Seville in faraway Spain. On the pantheon are the remains of the conqueror and his daughter, Francisca, who left a fortune to defray the expense of celebrating a daily Mass at the high altar. The visitor may see the tombs of the Archbishops and the very body of Pizarro, which is well preserved. One can see what a big strong man he really was, and that he had only one eye, the other having been put out by a javelin thrust.

Practical Wisdom of the Holy See

By Cardinal Newman

He is no recluse, no solitary student, no dreamer about the past, no doter upon the dead and gone, no projector of the visionary. He for eighteen hundred years has lived in the world, he has seen all fortunes, he has encountered all adversities, he has shaped himself for all emergencies. If ever there was a power on earth who had an eye for the times, who has confined himself to the practicable, and has been happy in his anticipations, whose words have been facts, and whose commands prophecies, such is he in the history of ages, who sits from generation to generation in the Chair of the Apostles, as the Vicar of Christ, and the Doctor of his Church. These are not the words of rhetoric, but of history. All who take part with the Apostle, are on the winning side. He has long since given warrants for the confidence which he claimed. From the first he has looked through the wide world of which he has the burden; and, according to the need of the day and the inspirations of his Lord, he has set himself now to one thing now to another but to all in season, and to nothing in vain. He came first upon an age of refinement and luxury like our own, and in spite of the persecutor, fertile in the resources of his cruelty, he soon gathered, out of all classes of society, the slave, the soldier, the high-born lady, and the sophist, materials enough to form a people to his Master's honor. The savage hordes came down in torrents from the north, and Peter went out to meet them, and by his very eye he sobered them, and backed them in their full career. They turned aside and flooded the whole earth, but only to be more surely civilized by him, and to be made ten times more his children, even than the older populations, which they had overwhelmed. Lawless kings arose, sanguinous as the Roman, passionate as the Hun, yet in him they found their match, and were shattered, and he lived on. The gates of the earth were opened to the east and west, and men poured out to take possession; but he went with them by his missionaries, to China, to Mexico, carried along by zeal and charity, as far as those children of men were led by enterprise, covetousness, or ambition. Has he failed in his successes up to this hour? Did he, in our fathers' day fail in his struggle with Joseph of Germany and his confederates, with Napoleon, a greater name, and his dependent kings, that, though in another kind of fight, he should fail in ours? What grey hairs are on the head of Judah, whose youth is renewed like the eagle's whose feet are like the feet of harts, and underneath the everlasting arms? ("Idea of a University," p. 13.)

CONSTITIATION CAN BE CURED.

There is Nothing to Equal Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills For This Purpose.

Mrs. A. Cumming, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with constipation for over five years, and feel it my duty to let you know that your Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills have cured me. I only used three vials, and I can faithfully say that they have saved me from a large doctor bill."

Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, and thus keep them regular. Irregular bowels are the main cause of constipation.

Bethel property, and Miss Catherine Van Worth, has taken the initiative in bringing the parishioners in closer contact for social intercourse and also for the purpose of assisting the chapel. She has started a club known as the Club of the Lady of the Mount. The members will organize a choir and will actively look after the welfare of the little chapel.

Was Constantly Troubled With Boils.

HAD NINE ON HIS ARMS AT ONCE.

Burdock Blood Purifier CURES HIM.

Boils are caused by bad blood, and unless the blood is made pure you cannot expect to get rid of them. Constipation and indigestion will do you no good. You must get at the seat of the trouble by using a good internal blood purifying medicine such as that good old reliable Burdock Blood Purifier.

Mr. Samuel Buckler, Tatumacross, N.B., writes: "Last summer I was constantly troubled with boils. I had nine on my arms at once. I thought it was caused from bad blood so I got five bottles of Burdock Blood Purifier, and before the first bottle was done I began to feel a great deal better, and before the second one was finished I did not have a boil, and have not had one since. I cannot recommend it too highly. Burdock Blood Purifier is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont."
