Newfoundland Aeroplanes.

Referring to Newfoundland's effort to assist in providing aeroplanes for an Imperial Aircraft Flotilla, a booklet, dedicated to Queen Alexandra, says:

"The thanks of the Central Committee and the Governors of His Majesty's Dominion of Newfoundland, to the various Patriotic Societies, and in particular to the Patriotic Association of Newfoundland, which led the way."

Special acknowledgment is made to His Excellency the Governor, the Patriotic Association of Newfoundland, and Mr. C. R. Steer, the energetic Secretary of the Aeroplanes Committee, Mr. Wrench, the Organizing Secretary of the Overseas Club, says:

"All our machines are at the front and hard at work, and the War Office has provided us with a most satisfactory account of their achievements."

Fifty of the hundred aeroplanes have already been arranged for or provided. The Newfoundland aircrafts are numbered 8, 9, 22 and 23, while the one given by the Messrs. Reid Bros. is numbered 10.

Marvellous Achievements.

The evacuation of Suva Bay and the Anzac just before Christmas, one of the most successful and biggest feats of the War. To repeat it within a few weeks and to withdraw all the military forces from the Krithia end of the Peninsula and thus to evacuate the whole Peninsula without military loss was a marvellous undertaking, and reflects the utmost credit on General Monro and Lieut-General Birdwood and Lieut-General Davies and Admiral de Robeck, who had charge of the gigantic undertaking. The navy met with a loss, happily not in lives, by the King Edward striking a mine, but the whole ship's company was taken off her before she sank. This loss is the biggest loss of the official list of casualties. She was the first ship put in commission of her class, which consisted of seven battleships, King Edward VII, Dominion, Commonwealth, Zealandia, Hindustan, Hibernia, Britannia and Africa. These ships are not Dreadnoughts or super-Dreadnoughts. They were planned before the Dreadnought was experimented on. The King Edward was completed in 1905. Nor are they so powerful as the two Lord Nelsons, which are intermediate between them and the Dreadnoughts. The Lord Nelsons carry four 12-in. and ten 9.2-inch guns. The King Edwards carry four 12-in. and four 9.2-in. and ten 6-in. guns. Much secrecy was maintained as to the strategy which enabled the Suva Bay and Anzac undertaking to be made without material loss, and that secrecy has enabled the feat to be repeated without military loss in face of an expectation that it might be repeated and after the notice of the previous achievement. Even though we must deplore the failure of the main campaign, the brilliancy of these two achievements gives confidence in the leadership and the staff which could carry off twice in succession such remarkable achievements.

The Coal Problem
—Action Taken.

It will be seen from the letter which the Colonial Secretary addressed to the coal dealers that the Government has decided to arrange for the importation of coal. This was done after the failure of the coal dealers to agree to the proposal made to them last Wednesday. On Saturday they were asked to agree to sell stocks imported before January 1st, at $3.00; and on failure to do so, they were ordered to sell to the Government at that rate, but that they would honour the orders sent by the Government or its committee, to the extent of the coal that was not under contract. It is likely a committee will be appointed to grant orders to those who wish to purchase coal in small quantities and who must purchase during the next few weeks.

How Jack Fitzgerald Was Killed.

We have been handed the following letter for publication:—

Suva Bay, 1/12/15.
Dear Mrs. Fitzgerald,—I want to be one of the first from the firing line to write and console you on the loss of your son—Jack—who has been dispenser and dresser for me since Captain Carthy handed him over to me on the Magnetic in the Mediterranean. I need not touch on his sterling upright and honest character, for I found him in all our relations at work this morning, and though, as dispenser, he might have sat still and let the stretcher bearers bring in the wounded, he was on his feet at once and rushed out to render first aid.

In doing so he fell a prey to the deadly sniper. While he was dressing his leg, he was wounded, but still went on with his work, receiving, unfortunately, three or four more wounds, one of which proved fatal. His loss, while it must be a great blow to you, will be felt almost as deeply by the officers and men of the First Newfoundland Regiment, who join with me in sending you their sincerest sympathy.

Believe me, yours faithfully,
M. O. 1st Nfld. ALEX. FREW.

Obituary.MINNIE USHER NEWS.

On Sunday, 9th inst., Minnie, beloved wife of Leonard C. Mews, passed peacefully to rest. Afflicted very early in life she has for the past twelve months been a sufferer from heart trouble, but her naturally bright disposition prevented even those most closely connected with her from realizing how much she suffered. Born at Brigus, C. B., 29 years ago, she was the third daughter of Annie and the late John W. Reubens. Besides her husband and two children she leaves a mother, two sisters and four brothers who although they mourn realize that her pure soul is on earth is ended only that she may continue that better life promised to all who fall "Asleep in Jesus."—Com.

Klark-Urban Co.

AT THE CASINO TO-NIGHT.
Much anticipation is already shown over the engagement of the Klark-Urban Company which opens a limited engagement at the Casino Theatre to-night. The fact that such famous plays as "Within the Law," "The Divorce Question" and "The Squaw Man" are to be presented at popular prices carries more weight than the ordinary weight to an engagement of this kind. No similar attraction has ever attempted a repertoire as pretentious as this or one so involving so great care in the general mounting of the plays. The complete scenic effects are carried for each and every play and no local stock will be used from the opening to the closing bill. The greatest of all New York successes, "Within the Law," which ran for two solid years at Edging Theatre, New York, will be the opening play for to-night and Tuesday night, and Wednesday matinee. Seats on sale at the Atlantic Bookstore.
