CHAPTER XXXIV.

DISSENTMENT.

Lady Valencia waited and wondered in vain next day, when at the hour fixed for the drive Mrs. Hannington did not appear. Later in the afternoon a little note from Molly reached her, couched in very cold and ambiguous terms. The writer was unable to drive out that afternoon, she said, and she neither gave a reason nor expressed any sorrow for her defection. This was rather a rude way of treating the proposal, and Lady Val flushed with vexation as she read the note.

"What does the child mean?" she said to herself. "She seems to have forgotten her manners—she never was distinguished for them, after all." Then came a sharp, stinging thought. "Can she have found out?—can he have told her that I—that I offered myself to him on his wedding day? Surely he would not do that. But as he is—said Lady Val, bitterly, "he would not forget so utterly that he loved me once!"

But in spite of these doubts and fears she turned a bright and smiling face on Captain Rutherford, when she met him at a dance that evening and gave him question in his eyes that he did not like to put into words.

"I have called," she said, with a little nod. "I am doing my duty, you see."

"You are the very kindest person in the world, Lady Valencia."

"I'm afraid it won't be of any use, Charlie. She does not like me."

"Quite possible, on the contrary. There are numerous people who don't like me," she said, with a little laugh. "Never mind: I will do what I can for her; and even if she does not come to me, I'll get some other people to call on her, and she can go to their houses."

"But why shouldn't she like to come to you?" said Charlie, in a puzzled tone. "Ah, why, indeed? She associates me a little too much with her old home-life, perhaps," said Lady Val, coolly; "she used to see me at Torrensburg, and she may think that I sympathize with her dear little stepmother, who is the sweetest and gentlest young thing whom I have seen for a long time."

"Indeed! I had an idea that the stepmother had been unkind to her, or something."

"I don't think Molly told you that," said Lady Val, with a flash of honest indignation.

"Oh, no, no; she said nothing about her. Some one said so at the club, I believe; I suppose it was a mistake."

"Quite a mistake, Mrs. Moncrieff is a charming little woman, with the kindest heart in the world; but she was not experienced enough to keep a tight hand on her stepchildren. It has been a great trouble to her. But Bertie adores her," said Lady Valencia, catching herself up with a sense that it was not becoming to talk of the Moncrieffs' affairs to their friend's son, "and I am glad of that, for he is really a nice boy, although a little weak in character."

"He is either coming or coming shortly. You might look him up, Charlie; it would be a kindness."

"I shall be delighted."

"I will get his address for you. Keep him out of mischief, if you can."

Captain Rutherford was only too pleased to undertake the mission. As soon as Bertie was settled in London, therefore, he found a very congenial and a very desirable friend ready to hand; and Mr. Moncrieff was grateful to Rutherford for thus making himself known. It had been one of Alan Moncrieff's initial mistakes in the training of his children to keep them secluded from acquaintances; the consequence was that, debarr'd from suitable friendships, they had made unsuitable ones for themselves, and the lives of both had been darkened and saddened through evil influences. Bertie was sincerely anxious to mend his ways and regain the confidence of his father, and it soon became a pleasure to him to spend as much of his time as possible with a man like Charles Rutherford, whose frank and honorable spirit was a perpetual spur and stimulus to his own.

Rutherford's regiment was quartered at Aldershot, but he found it easy to get frequent leave, and was as much in London as possible. He kept his word to Lady Valencia, however, and was careful not to go too often to the Hanningtons. He had found it necessary, for his own conscience's sake, to pull up, as he said to himself, "in time" for it was becoming a pain and an irritation to him to see Molly's pale and unhappy looks. He still maintained that he was interested in her solely because of his father's wishful eyes, but he could not forget Molly's wistful eyes, that her wan face haunted him night and day, and that he was possessed with such a desire to do her service that he would willingly have gone to the ends of the earth for her if she had so desired.

But it must also be said that Charlie Rutherford's admiration for Molly was of the purest and most reverential kind. If he had never seen her distressed or lonely, he might never have thought twice of her, save as an ordinary acquaintance; it was just because he often saw tears in her eyes that his chivalrous nature was so stirred. He vowed to be her friend, her brother, to the last day of his life, and he told himself that it was well for her that she should have one trustworthy "servant," to use the parlance of an older world, one who would be always faithful and helpful, and ready to maintain her cause against all comers. Having made up his mind in this way, he did not keep entirely from the Hanningtons, as Lady Valencia would have advised him to do, but went there discreetly, dining with John Hannington, and even playing cards with him when asked, but never for one moment altering the gentle respect of his manner towards the woman who—although he hardly knew it—now occupied the first position in his heart and mind.

The summer came to a close, and people began to leave town for their holiday rambles. Rutherford was due to his father's house before the end of July, and he was going to travel north with Bertie Moncrieff. Lady Valencia Gilderoy was bound for Norway with a select party of friends. Charlie came to see the Hanningtons before his departure. He wondered what they were going to do; he had not heard their plans, and Bertie had been unable to give him any information. Bertie was not very fond of going to his brother-in-law's apartments. He had developed as strong a dislike to John Hannington as his father and his friend had done.

Captain Rutherford found both husband and wife at home. Molly was looking exceedingly well, he thought, but she professed herself quite well—only a little tired by the heat. Hannington seemed to listen to his visitor's remarks with suppressed impatience, and answered almost rudely when Charlie once turned towards him. The flush of shame or alarm which instantly suffused Molly's pale face made the young man indignant for her sake, and yet all the more anxious to keep the peace. He asked her where she was going for the autumn.

"I don't know yet," she answered timidly, glancing at her husband. "We have not decided."

"It will probably end in our going nowhere at all," said Hannington, irritably. "And I hope you will like it if we do." The last words were addressed to Molly, who again flushed vividly and painfully.

Charlie began to wish that he had not come. He could not run away just yet, however, for Molly had given him a cup of tea, and he could not put it down untasted. John Hannington also seemed to feel some embarrassment at the turn the conversation had taken, for he pulled out his watch, declaring that he had an important engagement to keep, and that he was sorry to say he really must be off. And then he quitted the room, but as Charlie noticed, without a word of farewell or apology to his wife.

It struck Captain Rutherford that the two grew colder to each other in manner every time he saw them, and such was indeed nearly the case. For after that revelation made by Hannington of the real state of his affections—a revelation which could never feel to be anything but unspcakably brutal and degrading to herself—Molly's childish love for her husband had died a painful death. The veil of romance was torn from her eyes, and she saw him for what he was—or, rather, she saw the very worst side of him, and nothing else. She was not strong enough by nature to dominate and make a fairly good man of him, as Lady Val had declared to herself that she could have done. She was helpless; she trembled before him with the nervous timidity which harshness or injustice had always excited in her. She saw that he was selfish, sensual and hard, and she was too much shocked by her discovery to look for the few scattered rays of gold which existed in the baser metal of his character. It seemed to her that her whole life was ruined; she had shattered all possible happiness for herself, and she looked for nothing more.

City Manufacturers Petition for a Rent Water Rate.

A Reduction in the Present Rates Will Probably be Made—Springbank Electric Privileges.

The water commissioners received a petition yesterday afternoon from many of the leading manufacturers of the city asking for a reduction of the water rate to 5 cents per 100 cubic feet. The rate at present charged is 15 cents per 100 feet up to 20,000 feet. Between 20,000 and 30,000 feet the rate is 12 1/2 cents; from 30,000 to 100,000 the rate is 10 cents; above 100,000, 8 cents. According to a schedule prepared in the water commissioners' office, only four consumers in the city range above the 100,000 mark. The Tecumseh House gets away with $86,775 feet per quarter; D. S. Perrin & Co., 128,250; Parisian Laundry, 125,600; and McClary's, 124,600. The London Furniture Company uses about 75,000 feet, and a great many manufacturers use over 50,000 feet.

The petition set forth: 1. The present rates are so oppressive that we feel it a hardship to pay them. 2. We believe that the above rate will more than cover the actual cost of supplying water.

3. Taking into account the many disadvantages the manufacturers of the city are under compared with those who are located where they have the advantage of lake freight rates, we think that the city should do all that is possible to assist the manufacturers in turning up their trade and thus give employment to a greater number of men, and by so doing increase the population and importance of our city.

(Signed) Wortman & Ward, D. S. Perrin, Reid Bros. & Co., John Ferguson & Sons, Kensington Furniture Company, London Furniture Company, Patterson & Joly, A. Beck, Geo. White & Sons, W. J. Thompson, McCormick Manufacturing Company, John Campbell, Stevens Manufacturing Company.

Action was deferred on the matter, although Chairman Cowan dropped a hint that some reduction would at least be made, if not quite as much as asked for.

Manager Carr, of the street railway company, renewed the company's offer to open a year for the entrance to Springbank Park, and the British Road Company also sent in a communication asking that exclusive privileges be not granted to the London Street Railway Company. Both matters were laid over.

The solicitor will be instructed to alter the law to conform with the recent resolution, confining the watering of lawns within the hours of 6 to 8 a.m. and 6 to 8 p.m.

There were present Chairman Cowan, Commissioner Judd, Engineer Moore, Secretary Ellwood and Inspectors Platt and Plastow.

MIDDLESEX.

On the evening of May 24 the pupils of school section No. 10, Westminster, gave their annual entertainment in the school room, when the room was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and plants, presenting a very pleasing appearance. The building was packed, many being unable to find seats. The chair was taken by Rev. E. H. Savers, Wilton Grove, whose well-chosen and humorous remarks drew greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. The recitations, solos, dialogues, callisthenics, etc., rendered by the pupils reflected great credit upon themselves and upon Miss F. McColl, the efficient and successful teacher of the section. The auction of the evening was conducted by Mr. Sawell, who were especially delighted with the artists from a distance—Mr. McDonald, London, and Miss Saywell, Alma College, St. Thomas. Mr. McDonald rendered a number of very humorous solos, and he was warmly applauded. Miss Sawell received equal applause for her elocutionary powers. The proceeds of the evening were over $30.

Last Friday witnessed the first of White Oak's celebrations, and fully 600 persons on the ground to take part in the program. The following are the games and the winners: Ladies' races—1 Miss C. Under 7 years—1 Hugh McEatin, 2 Geo. Doble, 3 F. Shore. Girls, under 7 years—1 L. Hisslop, 2 Laura Doble, 3 Myrtle Hunt. Married men's race—1 John Archer, 2 Thos. Balyntine. Women's race—1 Mrs. Post, 2 Mrs. Mote. Thos. Archer, 3 Art. Adams and John Guest. A. Sutton, 2 Sid. Deacy and John Guest. Boot and shoe race—1 A. Adams, 2 John McWilliams. Young men's race—1 Wm. Jackson, 2 J. McWilliams, 3 A. Sutton. Special race—1 Wm. Jackson. Stand-off race—1 John Johnston, 2 Wm. Jackson. Running race—1 Sidney Deacy, 2 John Guest. Hop, step and jump—1 J. Guest, 2 Wm. Jackson. High jump—1 S. Deacy, 2 J. Guest. The program concluded with the climbing of the pole by J. Jones; a football match between the Oak school and all comers, resulting in favor of White Oak; and tug-of-war between the married and single men, which was very interesting and resulted in a tie. The whole day's sport concluded with a grand ball, the committee are to be congratulated on the able manner in which the arrangements were made and carried out. Special credit is also due to Mr. Shaver, of White Oak Store, for his efforts in making the afternoon's entertainment a success.

Sleeplessness is due to nervous excitement. The delicately constituted, the financier, the business man, and those whose occupation necessitates great mental strain or worry, all suffer more or less from it. Sleep is the great restorator of a worried brain, and to get sleep cleanse the stomach from all impurities with a few doses of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, gelatine coated, containing no mercury, and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or the money will be refunded.

The withdrawals from the Postoffice Savings Banks last month exceeded the deposits by $150,000.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels and affections of the throat, to which the young are especially subject.

THE EDITOR'S WIFE

A Sufferer from Headaches and Dyspepsia for Years.

A Frank Statement from Mr. N. Page Editor of Le Spectateur, Hull, Que., in Which He Tells How His Wife Regained Health and Strength.

The editor of Le Spectateur has often been asked whether he thought entire reliance can be placed in the statements appearing each week in the newspapers with reference to cures brought about by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and can unhesitatingly say that he believes the half has not been told, and that for each cure that has been made public through the press there are scores of others, no doubt quite as remarkable, of which the general public never hear. Many people shrink from permitting the publication of a statement of their cure, and for this reason it is never heard of outside the circle of their acquaintance. We believe this to be all wrong, and think it is a duty those who have recovered health and strength owe to others less fortunate to make the means of their restoration public. This at all events is the spirit that animates the editor of Le Spectateur in making known, for the good it may do to others, the fact that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have, in his own household, proven worthy of the high praise awarded them elsewhere. Mme. Page was for upwards of seven years an almost constant sufferer from headaches, pain in the back and dyspepsia. As a result her appetite was feeble, and she was reduced to a state of great weakness. It was in 1887 that she first began to be troubled, and this condition of affairs continued until 1893. At that time, as the result of having read so much of the cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a few boxes were secured, and it was soon observed that she was regaining her old-time health. The continued use of the pills for a time had the most beneficial effect. The headaches left, so did the pains in the back, and the stomach, and when she discontinued the Pink Pills it was with a feeling that her health was entirely restored. During the past winter Mme. Page had another somewhat similar attack, but, resuming again to Pink Pills, she was soon on the road to recovery, and we have no hesitation in commending them as an unequalled blood builder and nerve restorer, having seen their good effects in other cases than the one above noted.
