THE WOMAN'S CORNER

Why Not Learn To Be Graceful

It's a bit stupid of women that in their load of bricks, who can sit in church or frantic struggle for beauty they have the theatre without sitting on the back pinned their faith to clothes, and over-looked the grace which is the only real, best foot, but the best side of her, forreliable, blown-in-the-bottle substitute for ward. pulchritude of face and form.

bestowed upon you a saleratus biscuit complexion instead of one of peaches and cream, there is mighty little you can do to alter it. Also if you failed to draw a tall and willowy figure in the lottery of life, and got instead an apple dumpling shape, it is in vain that you starve yourrecipes for getting slight and svelte, for
