McIntyre, who was a Lobo farmer, was struck by a westbound C. P. R. express on what is known as the third concession 'skew' crossing on Feb. 21, of this year. He was driving in a light buggy at the time and his death was practically instantaneous. The plaintiff alleges that no signal was given by the approaching train, and that as the company knew the place to be dangerous, as other accidents had occurred there, they were guilty of negligence.

J. M. McEvoy is acting for the plaintiff, and McMurchy & Spence, of Toronto, for the defendant company. This action is number 3 on the jury list.
