LAND OWNERS

BLAMED FOR FOOD CRISIS IN EGYPT

Details of the situation throughout Germany are somewhat obscure, but there seems to be reason to believe the critical throughout the southern and western sections, while the Kapp regime is rather firmly entrenched in northeastern Prussia and in Silicia, where many towns and cities are reported to have declared their adherence to the new government.

BLAMED FOR FOOD
CRISIS IN EGYPT
Wheat and Other Cereals Actually
Have Been Ploughed Up When Approaching Maturity in Order to Sow Cotton.
London, March 8—The food crisis in Egypt is due mainly to land owners, including the land owning peasantry, increasing the area planted in cotton so as to take advantage of the soaring prices of cotton, according to the Daily Mail's Cairo correspondent.

"Wheat and other cereals actually have been ploughed up when approaching maturity in order to sow cotton," the correspondent continues, "and the cotton area is now nearly 25 per cent greater than before the war. Normally Egypt practically feeds herself but in view of the present shortage of cereals there is greater danger of the famished people being driven to rioting. The situation is bad in the towns, but it is worse in the country. It is act its worse in Upper Egypt where the difficulties of importations are greater.

"Gambling in cotton seed has been disastrously widespread among all classes. Mendacity and thet are rife. Nationalist agitators are persuading the peasants that their plight is due to the British. The outleok is difficult."
