It is a well established fact that mor us matter can be obtained from an nutritious matter can be obtained from an acre of land in root crops, than in any other. Thus an acre of Mangel Wurzel, of twenty tons builbs and eight tons leaves, would yield in builbs, 5,000 pounds, and in leaves 2,000 pounds of dry matter, while forty bushels of wheat contain only 192 pounds, and the straw 1,600 pounds of dry matter. A crop of timothy of two tons of hay would included the properties of the properties o yield not more than 3,500 pounds of dry matter, while an equal weight of clover hay contains only 3,200 pounds.

While, then, roots as a class contain some ninety per cent. of water, they nevertheless yield more dry substance than any other agricultural crop. Then, again, there is less effete matter in the dry substance of roots than in most other plants. Clover, timothy, straw, corn stalks, bran, and al most everything else commonly used for most everything else commonly asset of food, contains a very large proportion of woody fibre that is no more nutritious than an equal weight of sawdust. Common meadow hay and dry potatoes contain nearly an equal weight of nitrogenous compounds, say nine per cent of albumen, the flesh forming ringiple. In the potato. the flesh-forming principle. In the potato, however, the other 91lbs. is nearly all starch, while in the hay it is nearly all woody fibre. We can obtain, then, no only a greater quantity of dry substance, but also a much greater amount of truly nutritious matter in roots than from any other crop.

Nor is this all. The impovershing fects on the soils should also be taken into consideration. In this respect practical experience and scientific experiment alike decide in favor of Turnips, ruta bagas, mangles &c. (We fear potatoes are an ex-ception; there have been no experiments made, that we are aware of, that settle this point but common experience indicates that the potatoe is rather an exhausting crop. In our articles on "Lawes and Liebig," we have shown that where a turnip is abundantly supplied with available inorgan matter, it is comparatively independent of organic matter in the soil obtaining car-bonic acid and ammonia from the atmosphere, sufficient for an average crop.
Root crops, therefore, not only afford large amount of truly nutritive matter, by this matter is principally obtained from the atmosphere. Hence, the cultivation of roots is one grand means of increasing the amount of organic matter on a farm; an it is of organic matter, especially o ammonia, that most of our soils are defi-

All root crops delight in a rather light soil, deeply and thoroughly pulverized, and enriched with well rotted farm-ya.d dung, other quickly acting fertilizers, suc as Peruvian guano, or supersphosphate

CARROTS.-The value of carrots as a auxilary food for horses and milch cows, admitted to be very great. It is admirabl adapted to our climate, and though considerable labor is needed to weed them, &c vet on the whole, we know of no crop this vicinity which pays better. Our esteemed correspondent E. S. Hayward, Esq. is eminently successful in growing carrots. In the Genesee Farmer for April, 1853. wil be found an interesting communication on this subject. He prefers a yellow chest-nut loam, well manured with say 20 to 40 loads of rotten yard manure per acre, bu they will grow on any deep rich soil, and produce well. The soil should be tho roughly pulverized with the cultivator and harrow on the top, before ploughing, afte the manure is spread. Then plough deep and follow with rakes, and rake the top the furrow, and continue in this way til the piece is prepared, which leaves the und level and clean on the surface. Four hand will follow and rake as fast as a team will plough. The ground should be sown while moist, soon after it is fitted, in rows 12 to 14 inches apart, and half an inch deep. The soil should be pressed on the deep. The soil should be pressed on the seed by treading or rolling, to insure its vegetation. If sown by hand, the usual quantity of seed is four pounds per acre; if with a machine, two pounds is sufficient. The seed should be soaked in warm water 48 hours or more before sowing, then mix the seed will separat Sow as early in May as the season will allow. The ground may be marked out with a maker made for the purpose, and the seed covered with a rake. If the weather is favorable, they will be up, and ready for the first hoeing in about three weeks. The hoe should then be passed lightly through the rows, to kill the weeds and help the growth of the cavets. In the days, here growth of the carrots. In ten days, hoo again, weed and thin, leaving one plant in a place : in two weeks hoe deep, weed and thin, leaving the plants four or five inches apart in the rows, and the work will be completed for the season. If weeds grow after the last hoeing, weed them out, weeds and carrots can grow on the same ground to a good advantage.

Mangel Wurzel.—This is another roo
well adapted to our climate. It is not injured by insects or worms, and requires no hand weeding. The tops as as well as the builbs are excellent food for stock, and more food can be raised from an acre in mangel wurzel, than in any other crop we have ever cultivated. They are gross feeders; it is hardly possible to make the soi too rich for them they should be planted in rows 30 inches apart, and from 12 to 15 inches in the rows. The seed can be dropped and covered with a hoe, just as in planting Indian corn. It is advisable to drop four or five seeds in a hill, so as to secure one good plant. A little sulphate of lime dropped with the seed, will be beneficial in giving the plants a start; but superphosphate of lime, say a quarter to half an ounce in a hill, will be very much better. When placed in close proximity with the seed, it has a remarkable effect in stimulating the growth of turnips. Truta bastimulating the growth of turnips, ruta ba-ga, mangel wurzel, &c., and of a good article can be obtained at a reasonable price it will pay well to use it for these crops.

Mangel wurzel should be sown from the middle to the end of May.

RUTA BAGA.—Swedes or ruta bagas, are much more extensively cultivated in England than mangel wurzel, but they are not so well adapted to our climate as mangels. There are those, however, who assert that ruta bagas can be raised as well here as in Great Britain, and we should be the last to discourage the idea, for we believe that the extensive cultivation of this rout would be attended with many advantages; yet we believe the climate of the British Isles is better adapted to the growth of this root than the dry, hot summers of this country Ruta bagas can be sown in June, in the way recommended for mangels, or they may be sown in drils, like cerrots, and thinned out with the hoe 12 or 14 inches apart Be careful not to cover the seed too deeply By using superphosphate you may be sure of a crop.

As it will be in season, will not some of our correspondents give us their experience

CULTIVATION OF THE PEAR TREE.—BY DR. J. M. WARD, NEWARK, N. J.—If one of your correspondents had good reasons for thinking enough had been written on the subject of planting pers. It would become me to shrink from a compliance with the requests that are made to embody my observations on the subject, their treatment, the best varities, and the adaptation of the quince or pear stocks to our varying climate. I claim nothing more for my observations than the experience of a ten year's residence on a fruit farm, with a pear orchard of a thousand trees, embracing one hundaed varieties-objects of special inter-

Parsley, Mustard, Cress, Cauliflower, Cape Brocoli, Long P. Cuenmbers, Round Spinage, Summer Savoy, Thyme, Radish and Scarlet Radish. W. & R. Simson & Co's. importations this year

W. & R. Simson & Co's. importations this year are much larger, and more varied in their character than usual, particularly the improved Swedish Seed, Purple Top, being the fifth annual importation direct from the grower 'Geo. Hope, Esq., of Fenton Barns, East Lothian, Scotland,' and with respect to this very productive Seed, the character of which is now established. We feel greater confidence than ever in recommending their importation, this year to the notice of Farmers. On referring to the North British Agricultural newspaper, dated Edinburgh 28th Dec., 1854—we find that at the United East Lothian Agricultural Society, annual Show of Roots held in Haddington, the following extract from the report of the proceedings of that Society from the report of the proceedings of that Soci ety, viz: The marked success which attended the Root

The marked success which attended the Root Shows, and which was fully sustained at the Show in Dec. 1854, having induced the Committee to place on their list of premiums, a aweepstake of ten shillings, with one pound given by the Society, for the best five acres of Swedish Turnips, eleven members from various parts of the country became competitors. The Judge after taking much pains, and devoting nearly four days in inspecting the various lists entered, awarded the stake to Mr. Hope of Fenton Barns.

We simply quote this fact to show the quality and kind of Turnips, and the rank they hold in the opinion of Jndges, in one of the best Agricultural counties in Scotland.

As it is the Seed grown from these roots that we have been so successful for the last five years, in introducing into this country, and have induced the farmers in the country of Middlessx to cultivate this invaluable root extensively, with the certainty of a sure crop. And we are acquainted with farmers in this neighborhood, who quainted with farmers in this neighborhood, who clear £25 to £30 per acre from their Turnip County and Township Agricultural Societies supplied at wholesale pric W. & R.
