BOURDALOUE AND LOUIS XIV. OR THE PREACHER
AND THE KING, translated from the French of L. L. F.
Bungener, Geneva, (12th edition) with a Biographical Sketch of the Author. We think Messrs. Lothrop & Co. deserve the thanks of the reading community for the hand-somerly got up edition of the 'Bungener Historical Series' they are now publishing; it will prove a most valuable addition to the Literature of the season. Mons. Bungener's writings, while possessing all the fascination of romance are pre-eminent for truthfulness. "Truthfulness in the design, truthfulness in the details, truthfulness from first to last reigns supreme in M. Bungener's productions." No author imparts a more vivid reality to his impersonations.
Whether he conducts us to the splendors of Versailles, ushering us into the presence of him who pervaded all with his majesty, whether we pace up and down with him the Philosopher's Walk, listening to the eloquently pious discourses there; or, whether we draw our breath trembling at the dread conflict engaged between the Preacher and the King, we yield ourselves to the magic illusion with the unreasoning, intuitive confidence which the truthfulness of genius never fails to inspire.—Boston Cultivator.

D. Lothrop & Co., have commenced the publication of a series of historical romances from the pen of L. L. F.
Bungener, a Protestant minister at Geneva. The first volume of the series, entitled Bourdaloue and Louis XIV., or The Preacher and the King, has been already issued, accompanied by a biographical sketch of the author. This book has reached its twelfth or thirteenth edition in the original; and its popularity is chiefly to be attributed to the fact that it presents the events of history accurately and faithfully, at the same time that it weaves in with them a thread of romance which makes the narrative as entertaining as it is instructive. The other volumes in the series are Louis XV., and His Times, or The Priest and the Huguenot, "Rabaut and Bridaine" and "The Tower of Constancy." Price, $1.50. each.—Boston Daily Journal.
