MARGARET LEW.

"Miss Lew's interesting volume bears the recommendation to public favour of being written by the orphan daughter of one of Britain's heroes; a man who for forty years 'braved the battle and the breeze,' and whose death was mainly attributable to over-exertion in his country's service. This intimation, of itself, would ensure a large amount of public patronage; whilst the feeling and ability of the authoress will secure the admiration of her readers."—News of the World.
