proprietors in Canea, is a man of about (eventy years of age, of a majestic stacure, a fine face, and still exhibits in his features the marks of strength and vigour. He has had the command of several of the Grand Signior's caravelles, and paffed some time at Venice; he has travelled through Egypt, and vifited, according to to the religious custom of the Maliometans, the tomb of his prophet. His travels had entirely divosted him of that pride with which ignorance and the prejudices of their religion inspire the Turks, nor does he, like them, despise strangers, but con the contrary takes pleasure in and courts their fociety. Having invited us to spend some time at his country house. he fent horses for us, and ordered his sons to thew us the way. We accordingly fet out from Canea at eight in the morning, crossed that beautiful part of the country; covered with olive trees which extends to the foot of the White Mountains, and having rode through the whole length of the delightful plain of myrtles, arrived about noon at his house, fituated a league beyond it on the declivity of a hill. Ifmael received us with friendship, but without any of those demonstrations of joy and pleasure which ceremony lavishes in other countries. You are welcome, faid he, with an air of cool fatisfaction, and immediately conducted us to the place of entercainment.

The heavens were clear and ferene, but the atmosphere was heated by a burning fun, to which we had been four hours exposed. Nothing could now be so desirable to us as coolings, and our wishes were amply gratifie. The table was spread in the garden spinder the shade of orange-Six of these beautiful trees, planted in a circle, united their branches, which had never been mutilated with the Theers, and formed over our heads a roof impenetrable to the rays of the fun. In the mid---- dle of a very hot day we enjoyed in this arbour, which nature had fo profufely embellished, a delicious coolness. On every side flowers hung in garlands over the guests and formed a crown for each. The brightness of their colours, their exquisite odours, the beauty of the foliage, gently agitated by the zephyr, every thing conspired to make us imagine ourselves suddenly transported to some enchanted grove. To complete the whole, a beautiful stream, which descended from the adjoining hills, passed under the table and contributed to preserve the pleasantness and coolness of our arbour; on each fide of us we beheld it gliding over a golden fand, and winding its chrystal stream through the garden, in which a great number of Imall canals had been dug to convey its waters to the orrange, the pomegranate and the almond trees, which repaid the moisture they reached with interest in flowers and fruits.

ceived with interest in flowers and fruits, The table was now ferved; the Aga had endeavoured to provide for us fuitable to our taftes; We were presented with all. the utenfils common in France, and our host himself conformed to all our customs. Knowing that we were used to take soup, he served us with a great dish of roast meats, ferved with a delicious jelly: Round this were barravelles, almost as large as our hens, and with a fumet which; excited the appetite; there were besides excellent quails, a tender and delicate lamb, and hashed meat dressed with rice and perfectly well feafoned. The wine corresponded with the excellence of the rest of our entertainment. We were ferved with Vin de Loi, Malmeley of Mount Ida, and a fort of perfumed red . wine, equally agreeable to the finell and Our good patriarch, wishing to imitate his guests, and take his glass in defiance of the prophet, had fent away his fervants and his children. Laying afide the Turkish gravity, which never condescends to smile, he charted with much vivacity, and frequently aftonished us by the penetration of his understanding, the aptness of his replies, and the justiness of his When the diffies were removed we were presented with Moka coffee and pipes. Do not be too much shocked, madam, the pipes made use of here are of jasmine, and the part applied to the mouth, of amber; their enormous length entirely takes away the pungency of the tobacco. which in Turkey however is mild, and being mixed with the wood of aloes, produces a vapour neither difagrecable nor incommodious as in other countries.

Let me not be accused of painting the Turks in colours blacker than they deferve. I have travelled through their empire; I have feen the injuries of every kind which they have done too the sciences, the arts, and the liuman race. I fee them carrying, the plague with them from island to island, from country to country, without fuffering their eyes to be opened by the example of every other nation. And shall I not raife my voice against the abominable indifference of this barbarous people; shall I not inveigh against the destructive faralilm, and endeavour to find words lufficiently forcible to paint the crimes and horrors of their government, the enemy of the human species, which has destroyed more men by its odious tyranny, sthan ever fell by the fword of the most cruel conquerors. At the fight of these melancholy spectacles my heart groans and is
