

or other member of the staff takes in one or other of these journals and places it at the disposal of his confrères. And now this year the Medical Research Committee and the American Red Cross have stepped into the breach, and by their Medical Supplement and Medical Bulletin respectively have filled the breach. The problem, therefore, has been largely solved.

It deserves being more widely known than appears to be the case that the libraries of the Royal Society of Medicine, 1, Wimpole Street, W., and of the British Medical Journal at 1, Agar Street, Strand, have generously been thrown open to the officers of the C.A.M.C. Officers on leave, and those stationed in the neighbourhood of London, will find all help afforded them at these admirable libraries. Where officers at a distance urgently need to consult particular books or papers, application to the office of the D.M.S. (A.M.D.8) will in general secure either that the needed volumes are forwarded to them for perusal, or, failing this, upon request arrangements be made to secure abstracts of the articles required.
