

International Association for Students of Economics and Commerce

Program

The association is an independent, student-run, non-profit organization of business, economics and computer science students, which organizes an international employee exchange program. Each year, more than 6000 students gain vast experience from these traineeships in some 64 foreign countries.

Primary goals

The program attempts to bridge the gap between theoretical university education and the practical business world. In addition, the program develops internationally educated managers who can be effective in various economic environments in Canada and abroad.

International Workcamps Program

Background

The Canadian Bureau for International Education (CBIE), a non-profit, non-governmental educational organization, co-ordinates Canadian participation in international workcamps.

Programs

International Workcamps (IWC) provides an opportunity for young people from all over the world to work together on volunteer community projects in over 20 countries. Volunteers benefit through the experience of living and working as part of an international group. Communities benefit by projects undertaken.
