

This preliminary report, which is but the merest outline, is intended as a basis for investigation and discussion, and it is suggested that the next move should be along the lines of ascertained from Deans of individual Faculties in conference, and even from heads of various departments, further details for our information. Various other experts should be consulted as the occasion arises, and it is hoped thereby that a satisfactory estimate may be obtained of our physical and academic status.

The above summary suggests an expenditure far exceeding the probable income from any prospective campaign, but we would call attention to the statement already made that progress in a University can only be made by stages, and the above suggestions merely point the way.
