

Let him go up into the public chair.

Julius Cæsar, Act III., Scene II.

S. CARSLY'S
Reed Furniture,
COMPRISING
CHAIRS, TABLES, SETTEES & COUCHES,
PLAIN AND UPHOLSTERED.

Admitted by all who have compared them with other makers to be by far the best finished goods in the market.

A drawing-room, boudoir, smoking and bed-rooms can now be most successfully furnished with these goods, and at no time so especially as at the present,—when furnishing these rooms, individual taste and comfort has almost superseded the old conventional "Suite," removing what has long been an obstacle to the introduction of a variety of comfortable, easy and occasional chairs, lounges and settees; and when neatly upholstered in materials adapted to and harmonizing with other surroundings a most agreeable effect is produced, and it can be claimed for it that it possesses, elegance, strength and durability.

All upholstering of these goods is done on the premises and the materials used of guaranteed quality.
