

vince under its direction, should rather endeavor to respect the conscience of our people and to treat them as brethren, that is to say as the Anglo-Protestant minority of Quebec is treated by the French element, which is in the majority.

3. That the Roman Catholic religion, which is the trunk of Christianity and which, after all, rests upon beliefs, which Protestants largely share should be more respected by the Ontario press.

4. That the treatment of minorities should be based upon evangelical justice, Christian fraternity and the intention of the Fathers of Confederation, rather than upon the strict letter of the law.

5. That the opinion of the race which founded and evangelized Canada, which saved our country to the British Crown and which has done much for the Allies in the present conflict, without being constitutionally bound to do so, should no longer be despised, considering that our mentality, our ideal and our aspirations