Another Trick of the Porcupine Blind Piggers Discoved by Provincial Police.

SOUTH PORCUPINE. Aug. 21.—By the fortunate disclosure that barrels frement and pitch contained within them ten gallons of whiskey the projectal police of this district claim the step to a great deal

The find came about in a peculiar

Thomas Torrance on Saturday afternoon of this week. A barber by the name of Gagnon is out on $500 bail. Joseph Hudan Losses of the South Porcupine Hotel is out on $150 bail, while E. Juneau is awaiting a bondsman to be allowed his freedom until the trial takes place.

R. T. Smith and Ed. Jordan became suspicious of a barrel of tar, weighing nearly three bundred pounds, lying unclaimed at the station. They managed to shift the heavy barrel and heard a suspicious noise inside. They immediately opened the barrel, and by digging out the hard tar located the ten gallon keg of whiskey inside. A 500 pound barrel of cement which had been allowed to set solid was next investigated and another ten gallons of booze fell into the hands of the police. This was the start of an investigation which led to the arrest of the three men on whose premises, it is alleged, other evidence was found which led the officers to suspect that they were the ones carrying on this novel method of importation.

The barrels being addressed to non-residents of the town also aided the

The barrels being addressed to nonresidents of the town also aided the police in effecting the detecting of the booze. The method is indeed a novel
one. Before the barrel of cement was opened it was necessary to use a pick to breat away the hardened concrete from around the inner keg.
Evidently the keg had been packed while the cement was wet and it was

In the rear of the premises of one of the arrested men small empty kegs bearing more or less tar on the exterior were found, which led to the

-SHEEP AS TRAPS FOR FEVER TICKS Novel Experiment to Be Conducted by U.S. Government in Montana.

The free grazing of 2500 head of sheep upon the Bitterroot national forest, in the State of Montana, has been authorized by the secretary of agriculture as part of a novel experiment in trapping the deadly spotted fever tick. The forest service and the public health service are working together in co-operation with local theep growers in this new campaign. It is the general belief of the leading medical authorities that the myaterious and frequently faial disease rious and frequently fatal disease ammonly known as spotted fever is pread by the tick Dermacentor Anof and by the tick Dermacentor Anemoni, which in parts of the Bitteroot forest occurs in such abunda * e

Martyrs to Cause. The plan proposed contemplates the grazing of two bands of sheep upon the parts of the forest where the tick is most abundant, with the idea that large resolutions. large numbers of the ticks will attach themselves to the sheep. Then, as occasion requires, the sheep will be freed of the ticks by being dipped in an insecticide solution which will kill the ticks without in any way injuring the sleep.

the ticks without in any way injuring the sleep.

The engorging of the female tick with blood is one of the essential functions of reproduction, and this sorging must of necessity take place upon the larger mammals which serve as hosts to the tick. The United States biological survey has reached the conclusion that the great bulk of the fever ticks which become filled with blood get their supply while attached to domestic stock, and that if the domestic animals are freed of ticks by dipping, by spraying or by ticks by dipping, by spraying or by some other effective method of treatment the chances of the infection of human beings will be vastly reduced.
Of the different domestic animals the sheep is the most readily handled and the easiest to dip or treat, hence the selection of sheep for use in the experiment.

The way to handle them for best flavor is to to handle them for best flavor as to store them in a dark room or in drawers. Preferably they should not touch one another but this is not essential. It is advisable, however, not to pile them too deep at least for home consumption, because handling is apt to bruise them. The late varieties may be stored in boxes or kegs in cold approximate scarquarters until their approximate sea-

Apple, pear, peach and plum trees that are heavily loaded should be carefully examined without delay to see if they are likely to be able to carry their loads of fruit without limbs breaking. If there is any probability of breakage, they should be provided with props somewhat longer than the space from the point of support to the

The purchasers intend developing the property on the basis of its river advantages.

The Gien Stewart estate, the home of Mr. A. E. Ames, in the east end of the city, some 90 acres in extent, is being laid out by a firm of landscape engineers for subdivision purposes. Senator Cox is the owner and he offered to sell it to the city for park purposes at $675,000 some months ago, but the city declined the offer.

Many fruits are ripening just now and are coming on with a rush. It is therefore well to know what to do at the right moment so as to make the most of the garden. In the northern half of the United States and in southern Canada, grapes are beginning to ripen, and, unless there are plenty of them to supply the birds, some means of protecting them must be devised. Scarecrows are both unsightly and ineffective unless they will and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly and ineffective unless they will also been found highly has been found highly and ineffective unless they will also be a speciment and the partly ripe specimens used for cullinary purposes. With most varieties it is desirable. With most time. This will allow the tardy specimens a chance to increase in size and improve in quality. The method has been found highly profitable by commercial fruit growers and for the amateur has the added advantage of improving the quality of the fruits themselves.

If attention has not been given to when the wind blows.

Better than scarccrows are paper bags in which to enclose the ripening clusters.

It is now time to apply these. All that is necessary is to enclose the best clusters in the bags, individually, while still hanging on the vine and to draw lations, it should be given to the course of the period clusters in the bags, individually, while still hanging on the vine and to draw the mouths of the bags-tightly around the stems of the clusters with a few turns of string and a "half-hitch" knot. Other advantages are gained by this bagging. The fruit is made to ripen somewhat more evenly because of the partial regulation of the temperature when there are changes in the surrounding air. As a rule, the fruit is in thus made sweeter and more luscious than when grown without being bagged. Also there is usually a reduction in the mildewing of the fruits, and consequently a better keeping bagged. Also there is usually a reduction in the mildewing of the fruits, and consequently a better keeping to the most important rules in harvesaling this fruit is to gather the pears are seen as the stalks will separate easily seen on as the stalks will separate easily seen on the twigs on which they are form the twigs on which they are formed good balls of roots they should be transplanted to four-inch provided the twick of the twigs of the canes for the canes for the canes for the canes for the canes
