

NOTE.

BY DAVID STARR JORDAN, LL.D.

*President of Leland Stanford Junior University.
President of the American Vigilance Association.*

The little animal organism, spirochæta, devours the capillary walls in whatever part of the body it comes, and the nervous system most of all. Thus a man becomes "vermoulu," worm-eaten in life, as in Ibsen's Ghosts.

"It follows from the nature of marriage, that next to murder, adultery is the greatest of all social crimes."

—Charles Hodge, D.D.

"The idea of a campaign against prostitution and venereal diseases, in hope of eradicating both evils, should stand in the forefront of all demands of civilization."

—Iwan Bloch, M.D., Berlin, Germany.