

! must remember that every thing depends upon this, and we ought to know that they who have all their lives been violent opponents of every measure calculated to promote liberality in our institutions, and who have ever "warred to the knife" against the introduction of Responsible Government, and the liberalising

of King's College, are the very last men for us to give our support to. We therefore do not consider that it will appear extraordinary if we do view with considerable distrust, opinions advanced by such persons, and which are contradicted by every act of their past lives.