During all that time the British guns were drumming constantly in their ears a steady, ter-nible roar of destruction that was with them, wakening or sleeping. The German bombardment was drowned by the nearer tumult of the British reply, altho the shell bursts of the enemy

Later Mr. Baker saw another phase of war. In Italy he visited Venice. He found it a deserted city; its streets and canals, flanked by palaces and art works of priceless value, were deserted. An occasional soldier and here and there a lingering civilian were the only people of whom the party caught sight of. Only one store, a lace shop, was noted by the party a lace shop, was noted by the party as being opened.

Miss Steacy dealt with all sides of the art of short story writing, from the mechanical details of construction, paragraphing, length, etc., to the more important points of getting a good plot with an outstanding character taking the principal role in a single important event. She also discussed the type of stories most in demand, and gave some useful hints on how to market them when once written.

LITTLE LIGHT THROWN ON VASIL GEORGE DEATH

Coroner Dr. Demary last night opened the second sitting of the jury empaneled to investigate the death of Vasil George, an Austrian, who was found shot to death in a bush just out of East Toronto on Sunday, March 31. The crown was represented by George Shaver.

With but one exception, all of the witnesses were foreigners, and great difficulty was experienced by the coroner and crown in getting intelligent answers to their questions.

George Nicholoff, father of the murdered man, was unable to shed much light on the matter. As far as he knew, his son had never spoken to him about Gocho Christoff, the man now held by the police in connection with the case as a material witness, and had never mentioned that he knew him. Peter Johnson, who roomed with Vasil George, told of seeing George alive at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, the day he was killed. He told the coroner that he had dinner with George in an East King street restaurant, and, while they were eating, Christoff came in. He was not sure whether or not Christoff and George spoke, as he had known them to be bad friends for over a year and a half. He further stated that George had left the cafe shortly after Christoff did

Joseph Smith, a friend of George, stated that he had heard Christoff make threats against George, and on one occasion he had said he would shoot him. Christoff, he said, had at one time given George $30 and a railway ticket to Hamilton, and told him to buy a revolver. George refused and returned the $11 intended for the purchase of the gun, to Christoff.

Charles Nicholls and the proprietor of the cafe where George was last seen also gave similar evidence. Detective Nursey and Provincial Inspector John Miller are the police officers who have the case in hand. Owing to the fact that there are more witnesses to be heard, the inquest was adjourned until next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock.

Buck continued. "I simply suffered torture. I don't reckon anybody ever thad a much worse case of rheumatism than I did, and sometimes I was so crippled up that I couldn't do my work at all. My arms and legs, joints and muscles, would get so stiff and painful I could hardly bear to move. I couldn't cross my legs without lifting one over the other and my arms.

I couldn't cross my legs without lifting one over the other and my arms were in almost as bad a fix. My right arm was almost useless to me and, at night, I couldn't sleep for that nagging, unmerciful pain which never let up. I had taken all kinds of medicines and used bottle after bottle of liniments, but none of them ever helped me one bit.

"Well, sir, the results of Tanlac have completely surprised me. Before I findshed my first bottle I could feel the rheumatism letting up. Since I findshed my sixth bottle I have been out in all sorts of weather—wading in snow and sleet up to my knees, crawling under cars—and have exposed snow and sleet up to my knees, crawling under cars—and have exposed myself more than ever before, but I haven't 'est a sign of the rheumatism to this good day. Tankac seems to have cleaned it out of my/system entirely, and I certainly do think there's no medicine like it. I prize it above everything else.
