After the meeting Mr. Button of Ireland & Button, the large furniture men of Wingham, told The World that the furniture men had received an offer from an English syndicate, but the money consideration was not to their liking. He declared that if the syndicate went through it would consist of the Canadian manufacturers bound together in a joint stock company.

When this was retold to Mr. Hobbs, he said: "Oh, he was stringing you. You can said: "Oh, he was stringing you." You can said: said: "Oh, he was stringing you. You can rely that the English offer has not been refused."

man in a jewelery store, and proprietor of a paying cligar store, at 822 South Twentleth-street.

The guard, John C. Boyce, saw flames in the bushes about 8 o'clock. He walked over to the spot to see what was burning, and was horrified to see lying on the ground, writhing in agony, the body of a man, enveloped in flames. He took off his coat and threw it over the blazing form, but the man threw it off and rose to his knees, seeking to catch hold of Boyce. Boyce evaded bim, and, grasping the coat again, threw it on the blaze, and again it was thrown off. The guard, perceiving that he had to deal with a madman, shouted for help, and a milkman who was passing responded. He had in his wagon a ruber blanket, which he procured, and threw over Smith, and the guard held it down until the flames were quenched. The man, terribly burned, and then unconscious, was put in an ambulance and sent to the German Hospital. On the way he recovered consciousness, and asked why he was not allowed to die. The odor of oil was noticed, and being asked what caused it, Smith said he was tired of life and had determined to die. He said he had procured a gallon of kerosene, gone to the clump of bushes in the park, poured the fluid over his clothes and ignited it.

Smith has been melancholy for months, and has talked much of religion and sacrifices made by Biblical characters. The physicians say he cannot live.

How purifying and ennobling are the sacred influences of home. Thousands on thousands of men have been saved from eternal ruin by the potent affection of mother, sister, wife or child, whose self-denying love has averted moral disaster, driven away despair, filled life with the sunshine of hope, and wisely guided ambition into safe paths that led dally in the commercial world. Manufactonly a brute would turn in unkindness or neglect against ment in all such concerns are necessarily those to whom so much is due high, hence, in this age of keen competed and whose weakness and dehampering product. The combine, the trust or the syndicate offers the most tempting that have been established by The World was credibly informed yesterday that the Canadian furniture manufacturers were on the eve of forming a mamnoth trust to control the whole furniture trade of Canada. For the past two days the 42 members of the Canadian Furniture Manufacturers' Association, with head office in Toronto, and secretary John R. Shaw have been in the city ostensibly to look after the interests of the Furniture Export Company, formed some 1s months ago, but really they have been present to discuss plans of forming a trust, W. R. Hobbs of London, who is largely interested in manufacturing furniture, mirrors, etc., has been at the Queen's, and taily has been interviewed by other furniture men from all over Canada.

Meetings have been held and the whole Extra Specials in Black Dress Stuffs Meetings Have Been Held.

Mggtings have been held and the whole matter talked over. It is not a new thing, for it was broached over a year ago; still it has been going ahead and apparently now is the critical moment when the manufacturers will have to say yea or nay to the consummation of the scheme.

The furniture talked over. It is not a new thing, dom will dictate total avoidance of perilous indulgence and warn those who have felt that they are already in deposit

A Big Trade.

The furniture trade is a big one. Anderson of Woodstock has a factory valued at $600,000, and there are others. Not all of the 42 manufacturers have decided to go into the trust, but more than half of them have. Granting that 25 join hands, and fixing their value at an average of $200,000, this would mean a capital of $5,000,000 to start with. The moral support that this union would give to the backward dealers would coax many of them to come into the ring, and the seven million mark would be in sight. ed in the system. Perhaps this is true, for Mr. Hawke of London, England, representing the syndicate, is hourly expected to cinch the deal one way or the other.

Which reaches the transmitted alcoholic craving in the blood.

Some men, grown strong in discretion, have felt free from the inclination for intoxicants one way or the other.

Mr. Hobbs was asked if he did not think the same arguments adduced to prove that the bleycle trust would succeed applied to the furniture trust, and Mr. Hobbs said:

"I, should think so." A Man Sets His Clothing in Flames his family and friends with his inexplicable craving for strong Philadephia, Sept. 29.-A violent struggle drink.
