A BACHELOR'S CONSOLATION.

A Romance of the Twentieth.

BY ROBERT LLOYD.

In a long little old, well-thatched cottage...

With his cat, and his dog, and his little pet...

Our hero, 'twas said, would never marry...

'Till he met her, with her hair in ringlets...

There no doubt were missed and made quite...

Who would fly to relieve his distress...

The appearance of her hair and dress...

Now, this happy old bachelor found by a friend...

Of the most of his morning journal...

Having fully determined to get a machine...

For some thought the "Wheeler & Wilson"...

And now for the "Pioneer" was ready to fight...

Then down to the agent of "Pioneer" he went...

But our Bachelor then concluded that...

Then they told him another advantage they...

Our hero replied, "What the use of the cost..."

The "How" and the "Wilson" both vainly he...

The "How" and the "Wilson" both vainly he...

The "How" and the "Wilson" both vainly he...
