

H. J. CHILDS WINS IN WARD ELECTION BY 1,585 MAJORITY

East London Druggist Defeats J. M. Donahue, Solicitor and Labor Candidate, in Contest For City Council Vacancy Left by Late Alderman C. G. Moorhead.

By a majority of 1,585, H. J. Childs, druggist, 633 Dundas street, was Saturday elected alderman for Ward 4 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Ald. C. G. Moorhead. He received 1,844 votes and his opponent, J. M. Donahue, 289 votes.

Both the total number of votes cast and the majority for Childs were surprising to those in touch with the situation. The total number of votes cast was only about one-third of the vote recorded in Ward 4 at the last municipal election, when more than 6,000 ballots were marked for the eleven candidates who were in the field. Childs, however, is the highest yet recorded for an individual alderman in a ward election. Ald. Moorhead's vote of 1,844 last January was the highest to that time.

Majorities Everywhere.—Everyone of the 22 subdivisions in the ward gave Alderman-Elect Childs tremendous majorities. The railway poll conducted for three days before the election resulted in 49 votes for Mr. Childs and 9 for Mr. Donahue. The greatest vote was recorded in subdivision 60, where 127 votes for Childs and 15 for Donahue were cast. Donahue made his best run in subdivision 53, where he got 27 votes.

Better organization and the widespread popularity of the winning candidate, who has long been one of the ward's most prominent businessmen, given as explanations of his overwhelming success. Mr. Donahue, although he has lately been active in labor circles, was not widely known throughout the ward. Labor has never received strong support in this section of the city. All three of its candidates were defeated there last January. Donahue's vote Saturday was well up to the average which they polled on that occasion.

Alderman-Elect Childs, after expressing his thanks to his supporters, pledged himself to exert his best efforts to the advancement of the city in every way.

IT'S ALDERMAN CHILDS NOW

H. J. Childs, well-known East London businessman, who was returned by a very large majority in Saturday's voting.

He deeply appreciated the work done for him by his friends, and was particularly impressed by the active interest taken by the women in going to the polls and also in urging others to do so.

Was Expecting Defeat.—Mr. Donahue was fairly certain of the outcome of the contest early in the day, although he did not expect the majority against him to be so heavy. He believed that under the conditions he had made a good run. He expressed thanks to those who had supported him in the campaign, and also complimented his opponent on the manner in which he had conducted his campaign. "It was a clean fight throughout, and I cannot speak too highly of Mr. Childs," he said.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN HEAR ADDRESS ON 'TRAINING WORKER'

Miss Ethel MacRobert Is Speaker At Meeting in Arts Building.

"The Training of the Worker" was the subject of a very interesting talk given by Miss Ethel MacRobert before the University Women's Club at the Western "U" arts building on Saturday night. Miss MacRobert, who spent last year in industrial research work in the United States, had a fund of interesting information on which to draw. Her talk was really a discussion of the conscious attempts at the present time to train the worker.

In referring to occupational and part-time classes in public and high schools, she maintained that the opinion of many investigators was not so favorable to such part time classes; that in practice they did not work out as satisfactorily as they should. She mentioned, however, different centres of industry, where such classes were being tried out. In one instance she spoke of a city where 500 children had been rushed out of school to help in a three-day sale, and concluded her story by putting the question "which would profit, the child or employer?"

Vocational Schools.—A second attempt to train the worker was made in the vocally technical, vocational or trade school, she said, mentioning the "Manhattan Trade School for Girls" as one of the most important of these institutions. Here dressmaking, millinery, lamp-shade making, etc., were taught, as well as the girl's own trade, in order to tide her over seasonal slumps in her own industry. She said that girls from such a school were snapped up immediately at a good initial wage.

Vestibule Schools.—Still another method of training the worker was by means of vestibule schools, maintained in the industry itself, and the speaker asserted that wherever such training was adequate to the needs of the workers, the girl was always found to be willing to do her share. There were several methods of giving this training. By one method the worker was given an opportunity of seeing something of all the operations in the mill during the first few weeks of her being there, and that she thus came to understand how her small job and all the other operations of the mill were related to the whole industry.

Three-Position Line.—A second way of training within the industry was to put one skilled worker and several others in various stages of learning on one machine, and constantly shift workers in this manner until each knew her job. Still a third way of training the workers was known as the three-position line of working, in this case a girl having not only to learn to be able to take the job above her, but also to teach the worker below her how to take her job.

The educational departments in big department stores were also discussed, as were the special classes maintained for those whose business it is to train others.

The speaker closed with the question: "What types of courses shall be given the girl between 14 and 16 years of age?" The solution of such a problem can only be arrived at by the careful thought and study of socially-minded men and women.

The tendency of the dictaphone to take the place of the shorthand writer and the probability of the wireless telephone taking the place of the typewriter because of failure to keep exactly to the plans laid down. The collapse of the Quebec bridge is another example. Is it not true in religion in the building of character that the laws must be kept? There must be no juggling with the laws of God.

LECTURE ON "PROOF OF SUPERSSENSUOUS PLANES"

Dr. R. W. Shaw Speaker At Meeting of Theosophical Society.

An interesting address was given by Dr. R. W. Shaw to a large audience in the Theosophical Hall on Sunday evening, his subject being "Proof of Super-Sensuous Planes." The speaker stated that spirit and matter are one and the same thing, two poles, one negative and one positive, and that every particle in space is separated by interpenetrating ether. Dr. Shaw stated that through the motion of ether heat was produced, and that heat produced the air; the air produces water, and then what was called solid matter. Science in its recognition of ether branches into the metaphysical, and practically recognizes the higher planes.

LENTER SERMON URGES RESPECT FOR PARENTS

"Honor Mother and Father," Text of Rev. J. T. C. Morris.

In a special Lenten sermon delivered to the young people of the Askin Street Methodist Church, Rev. J. T. C. Morris urged the members of his congregation to hold in respect their parents, and to regard old age as holy. His message was based on God's commandment, "Honor thy mother and thy father."

This commandment, he said, applied to all children, and included all parents, for God did not say "Honor thy mother and thy father" but "Honor thy mother and thy father who are respectable." It mattered not what position they held in the social scale or what their faults were; the mere fact that they were growing old, he claimed, was sufficient to command respect.

Mr. Morris emphasized that the little things counted much in making the lives of the old people happy. He believed that the little kindnesses performed daily while they lived showed more love than all the rich funeral offerings and magnificent tombs which might be built after death.

Wisdom of Age.—The old, he concluded, should be revered for their wisdom born of experience. They have wisdom which the young could know nothing about for knowledge was much different than wisdom. He urged all boys to go to their fathers for advice. The worst father, he said, would give better advice than the best mother.

He strongly advised all mothers and fathers to never give their worldly possessions to their children while they lived. "Too many young people, he said, forget what they owe to their parents, and so when they married they shut their parents in one small room. 'Keep your money,' he concluded, 'for when you have your possessions they will at least respect you in the knowledge that it will pay.'

ASK CLEMENCY FOR NORMAN GARFIELD, SENTENCED TO DIE

Petitions For Commutation of Penalty To Be Circulated Here.

Petitions for the commutation to imprisonment of the death sentence of Norman Garfield for killing Ben Johnston, proprietor of a Woodstock restaurant, will be placed in circulation in London this week, according to E. M. Westland, who stated to The Advertiser last night that he is opposed to capital punishment and believes further that Garfield did not intend to kill his victim.

"Garfield's crime was accidental," said Mr. Westland. "We do not attempt to condone his crime of robbery, but the crime of murder was not deliberate on his part. To my mind, it is a far greater crime for society as a whole to be guilty of a deliberate execution. It is another murder, and a murder in cold blood."

J. B. Wright, a member of the London Board of Education, was mentioned by Mr. Westland as another member of the committee which plans to place the petitions for clemency for Garfield in circulation here at once.

SERMON ON "ENGINEER'S DEMANDS IN RELIGION"

Rev. Thomas Roy Addresses Kiwanis Club in Talbot Street Church.

"What the Engineer Demands in Religion" was the subject chosen by Rev. Thomas Roy in Talbot Street Baptist Church last night, when the London Kiwanis Club attended in a body.

Mr. Roy preached from the text found in Matthew 23:— "And it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock."

"There is a world of philosophy in these words," said Mr. Roy. "Spoken by the greatest seer of the ages, the Son of God, they carry with them all the weight of a piece of eternity. The words give us the impression of stability, of solidity, of permanence. They lift us above the tides, above the flash of lightning and the crash of thunder, above all the material forces of the universe, and set our feet on that which will stand the shock of doom. It is fitting, therefore, that we should take them as the basis of our thinking upon what the engineer or builder demands in religion. Back of all the success that we achieve in the building of character is the unchangeableness of law."

Mr. Roy drew arguments from Scripture, from history and from experience, to prove the unchangeableness of law in religion. Honesty in Building.

"The second thing demanded by the engineer," he said, "is faithfulness and honesty in construction. The law must be kept to the letter in its construction. Great engineering ventures have been failures because of failure to keep exactly to the plans laid down. The collapse of the Quebec bridge is another example. Is it not true in religion in the building of character that the laws must be kept? There must be no juggling with the laws of God."

51 CANDIDATES RECEIVED INTO ANGLICAN CHURCH

Bishop Williams Conducts Confirmation Services in Three City Churches.

Right Rev. Bishop David Williams performed the rite of confirmation in three Anglican Churches on Sunday. The largest class of candidates was presented by Rev. Canon G. B. Sage in St. George's Church, West London, where 25 were received into full membership on Sunday morning. In the afternoon a class of six candidates was presented at St. David's Church by Rev. R. D. Moss. The third confirmation service was held at St. James' Anglican Church, Here Rev. Leslie Armitage presented 20 candidates.

In his sermons at the three services, the bishop warned the young people who had received full membership with God against drifting, which is a tendency of the age. Regard the Bible diligently, and paying earnest heed to the teaching of the scriptures were two of the main things impressed upon them.

"The Changing Years" is Subject of Rev. W. R. McIntosh.

"The Changing Years, 1911-1921," was the subject of Rev. W. R. McIntosh at the King Street Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning. Rev. Mr. McIntosh has been pastor of this church for ten years, and his sermon included some very interesting figures, which gave one an idea of the changes in that length of time.

"When I first came to this church," he declared, "I had a congregation of 60 people. Out of that number there only remain 125 at present, just about the same."

David Rose on "Brotherhood" Is Given by David Rose.

Yesterday morning's service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, conducted by the Men's Union of the church, was impressive. With the choir joined entirely with men to lead the singing, and with John Laughton, David Rose and Alexander Hay in the pulpit, the service was given over entirely to the men. One of the highest moments of the service transpired when the choir of male voices sang along the third verse of "Onward Christian Soldiers," while the congregation remained temporarily hushed.

The address of the morning was given by David Rose on "Brotherhood." Mr. Rose pointed out what a poor showing brotherhood among men had made in the past, and how far the world was from universal brotherhood even at the present time.
