

National No-News Embassy moves to Texas

OTTAWA (CUP) Prime Minister Joe Clark announced today that Canada is considering moving its Iranian embassy from Tehran to San Antonio, Texas.

Clark explained that his government did not see the proposed move as an indication of support for the deposed Shah of Iran, who is now receiving treatment for cancer in a San Antonio military hospital. Rather, he said, the government is simply recognizing reality.

"After all," said the prime minister, "South Africa, Argentina and Chile have already done so, and we do not wish to be out of step with world opinion."

When asked whether this move would not provoke retaliation from the Iranian government of Ayatollah Khomeini, Clark replied, "Ayatollah who?"

Rodents beat engineers

LOS ANGELES (ZNS) — Recent tests have revealed that both hamsters and mice perform better than engineers in selected experiments.

Reporters were invited to the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory to view controlled tests that compared the performance of mice, hamsters, and engineers in tests of mathematical ability, maze-running and verbal skills.

Engineers and the rodents performed almost equally well in the tests of mathematical ability, which required the subject to separate pumpkin seeds into three equal piles.

In the maze-running events, subjects were timed as they ran to the campus cafeteria. Mice and hamsters showed only a slight time superiority in this category.

It was in verbal skills, however, that significant differences were observed.

Rodents showed consistent superiority in multiple choice questions of grammar and spelling.

As one engineer said, "Them critters were just lucky."

NUS executive club

MONTREAL (CUP) — Scandal rocked the National Union of Students (NUS) yesterday as it was revealed that members have established a private supper club for NUS executives.

The club, located in a penthouse above Regine's disco in downtown Montreal, is called La Vanguard du Revolutionne, and features gourmet cuisine from various countries.

The club was discovered when NUS member organizations began noticing that the executive were disappearing for several hours every evening.

They traced the executive to the club and burst in to discover them consuming Chateau Rothschild, truffles au vin and fresh golden caviar flown in from the Caspian sea.

The NUS president was unavailable for comment, but secretary Connie Quail-Partridge said, "Woo-woo-Ch-boogie."

Rum flavoured.
Wine dipped.

Crack a pack of Colts along with the cards.
