Primitive fraternities A BOOK ON PARENTS

With the rise of interest in psychology today, there has also been a rise in the number of self-help and how-to manuals. There must be thousands of pamphlets on how to deal with children, such as "How to Make it Through Puberty", "There is Through Puberty", "There is Life After Acne", "Birds and Bees and You and Me", that sort of thing. Any parent can read these brochures to get some idea on how to deal with those strange beings living under their roof. What I want to know is why aren't there any books on "How to Deal with Parents, We are People Too". Doesn't anyone think we have any problems living with these

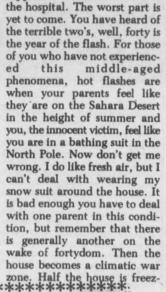

You must realize that the average parent of a teenager is in his or her forties. Turning forty is a big milestone. My father spent the whole day walking around saying "Oh God my life is half over" and then proceeded to tell us that he would like to be cremated and have his ashes thrown to the four winds. Then come the medical journals and he goes around quoting statistics like "3 out of 10 men over forty have heart attacks." So weird creatures called parents.

You have lived with these people all of your life and in that time you come to believe that you know them. This all

Calvin Kleins and Levis and is borrowing your clothes. You can deal with this. it is generally seen as an improvement after all of these years of tender tootsies and bell bottoms. It is also hard to recognize your father in this stage. The man who yelled and complained about you fooling with your hair now spends hours fluffing his own. What really gets me is that he only has about thirty hairs on top. How much time the hair and still have it cheaper than the set price.

Your parents made it through the terrible two's. Don't worry, you will make it through the year of the flash. Two kids were talking yesterday about how weird their parents were. I just went up to them and said "Just you wait until they're forty".
