

I could wish I knew more in detail of your life & days - but I know for the "little things" of existence eat into ones lives, so as to cut - slack - the time for other occupations - even that of keeping up closely with ones friends.
But - Rappily friends remain friends & I always feel very sure of you even in silence. I hope you are feeling really better than before your election the strain of which was so great - in ex.
Since I wrote last - little, & you - much has happened to me for I was very nearly killed in a motor accident.
I spent two very quiet - & Rappily months at Silverdale, & yet really

Dear Mr. King:

It would have been a real pleasure in itself to hear from you, in that I know must be such a busy life for you now - a-days.
But - I was, & am, as you so sympathetically knew I should be, so relieved to get news of Fugwell. It was kind of you to write at once, & to try to find his letter to you to show me, which of course I should like to see if it turns up. I had wondered rather long - to had you to
