

Branch No. 4, London. Meets on the 1st and 4th Thursday of every month, at 8 o'clock, at their hall, Albion Block, Richmond street. P. F. Boyle, President; Wm. Corcoran, Sec. Sec.

C. M. B. A.

Assessments Nos. 6 and 7 now issued call for two assessments to pay the beneficiaries on twenty-eight deaths—4 in Canada, 8 in Pennsylvania, 12 in New York, 3 in Michigan and 1 in Ohio. The Reserve Fund now amounts to $51,875.07.

Representatives to Grand Council meeting in Montreal in September, 1890, are requested to send their addresses to the Secretary of the Reception Committee, stating the length of time they may be able to remain in Montreal. Address: J. O'Leary, P. O. Box 347, Montreal.

One of our Deputies having organized a Branch and not having sent in his report of same until nearly a month after the date of said organization, was the cause of an error in the numbering of some of the lately-organized Branches.

Branch No. 125 was organized at village Lazon, Lewis, P. Q., on 7th April; Branch No. 126 at Calgary, N. W. T., on 9th April; Branch No. 127 at Windsor Mills, P. Q., on 22nd April; Branch No. 128 at Parkhill, Ont., on 22nd April; and Branch No. 129 at Granby, P. Q., on 23rd April.

List of officers of Branch No. 125 organized by Special Deputy Charles Darveau at village Lazon, Lewis, P. Q., on April 7th 1890:

- Spiritual Adviser, Rev. E. F. Fard President, Rigobert G. Bourget First Vice-President, Edward Bergeron Second Vice-Pres., John Cyrille Blouin Recording Sec., Joseph O. Martineau Assistant Sec., Adolphe E. Demers Financial Sec., Joseph A. Bourget Treasurer, Jean D. Nolin Marshal, David F. Pelletier Guard, Joseph A. Gagnon Trustees, Louis P. Pihlout, Adolphe E. Demers, Joseph Lavette, Joseph E. Chabot and David F. Pelletier.

Formosa, March 14, 1890. To the Members of the C. M. B. A., Branch 31, Guelph, Ont.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHERS—The members of Branch No. 72, C. M. B. A., whilst lamenting the loss of Brother John Haertzer, late a member of our Branch, who died in Guelph on March the 4th, was almost a stranger with you. When you received notice of the demise of said Brother Haertzer, you took immediate steps to attend the funeral and came forth as warm comforters of the bereaved wife, and rendered prompt assistance to our Branch in filling up the death form, using your own forms for the same; now, therefore, the members of Branch No. 72 humbly beg the members of Branch No. 31 to accept their sincere thanks for the prompt, kind-hearted assistance to our Branch in filling up the death form, and for the blessing of God through the merits of Christ and the intercession of the Blessed Virgin for themselves and their families, and also for the success and prosperity of the Branch.

This is a happy and edifying beginning for Branch 124, and will not fail to produce happy results, both spiritual and temporal, should the members persevere in that course, viz. approaching the sacraments on the principal festivals of the Church every year on the recurrence of such festivals. It is expected that the existence of a Branch of the C. M. B. A. in this parish will, through the zeal and exertions of its Spiritual Director, Rev. John Connelly, effect a great deal of spiritual good.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 29th, 1890. DEAR SIR AND BRO.—My address after May 1st, 1890, will be Madison street, Brooklyn, N. Y. This change is due to the fact that it became absolutely necessary owing to the rapid increase in membership to provide better facilities for the proper transaction of our business. In compliance with the resolution adopted by the trustees at their last meeting, I have secured suitable quarters at the above number, and purchased a first class fire-proof safe in order that our valuable books and papers may be properly protected. The office is furnished with all the necessary requirements. Extending a cordial invitation to members to call when in this vicinity, I remain Your's fraternally, C. J. HICKEY, Supreme Recorder.

HANDSOME GIFTS ACCOMPANY A CONGRATULATORY ADDRESS TO MR. H. A. COSTIGAN. Mr. H. A. Costigan was allured into the Inland Revenue office Saturday evening. He found there assembled several friends, who greeted him warmly and after congratulating him on the recent event in which he was one of the chief actors, order was called, and Mr. E. P. Drowry proceeded to read the following address, which speaks for itself:

To H. A. Costigan, Esq., Collector Inland Revenue for Montreal and North West Territories: DEAR SIR—At the interesting period of your life, and on so happy an occasion as this, your union with one of the fair ladies of the North-West, it is but natural that your friends should desire to tender their sincerest congratulations and good wishes to yourself and Mrs. Costigan, and to express your hearty appreciation of the uniform kindness and courtesy shown to those with whom you have been associated either in your personal or official capacity. These excellent qualities appear to be one of the unchanging characteristics of the department with which you are connected, and in which you have the honor to occupy a high position of trust and responsibility. Your friends also desire to express with equal warmth their best wishes that yourself and fair consort may enjoy health, prosperity and happiness, the outcome of true affection, making life's voyage one of sunshine and pleasure, and all tending to strengthen that confidence which gives business success.

On behalf of the friends alluded to we ask you to accept this address and the other tokens of sincerity and friendship which accompany it.

The address was accompanied by a beautiful antique Italian marble clock and a superb parlor suit.

Mr. Costigan made a very happy speech in reply to the address, and some of the gentlemen followed him with a few remarks appropriate to the occasion.

After the presentation the party went to Velies, where the balance of the evening was most pleasantly spent. Among the subscribers to the address and gifts the following attended the presentation: Ald. Smith, Ald. Mather, E. L. Drewry, Alex. McIntyre, C. B. Deacon, J. G. Carroll, Fred Sprado, F. G. Walsh, Geo. Wisbart, Jos. Carey, Geo. Velle, W. George, J. K. Barvitt, Fred W. Drowry, B. Thompson, H. McKitterick, P. O'Connor, M. McManus and P. Shea. —Winnipeg Free Press and Sun.

Winnipeg Review, April 30.

In this issue of the Review we publish an address from the business men of Winnipeg to our young and esteemed friend Mr. H. A. Costigan, Collector of Inland Revenue. Such a high tribute to Mr. Costigan's social and official record must be very gratifying to him and satisfactory to his friends and the Department. We can cheerfully testify to the able and efficient conduct of the Department's business under Mr. Costigan's charge. A painstaking and efficient officer, a warm and trusted friend, he starts in life with all the qualities that go to make life successful and bright. The Review offers him its most hearty felicitations and trusts that every happiness may attend himself and fair consort through life.

Scenes at the Opening of the New Town Graphically Described.

HOW THE EXERCISES IMPRESSED AN EYE-WITNESS—THE ENTHUSIASM OF THE PEOPLE—THE STREETS LITERALLY PACKED—THE ABSENCE OF THE POLICE MADE ORDER POSSIBLE—ENGLISH GUESTS—THE SPEECHES AND THE BANQUET.

Special Correspondence of the Republic.

Dublin, April 15, 1890.

The demonstration at the opening of the new town of Tipperary on the 12th was one that will be history in the record of this latest struggle for Irish independence. The influx of people into the town assumed vast proportions early in the day, and by the time that the formal exercises began the streets were literally packed. The great enthusiasm shown proved that agitation was of no half-hearted kind, for never since Mr. Parnell held his series of meetings in the old town was any gathering more representative of Irish manhood seen, and there was coupled with the enthusiasm a business-like, practical air and a sense of organization quite unusual in the stirring phases of a public agitation. Among the signs of general rejoicing manifested on every side there was the contrast of closed shops and deserted streets in the old town—a symbol of the change that is taking place in the Ireland of to-day.

The deputations from the towns close to Tipperary began to arrive at an early hour in the morning, and the bustle and animation in the streets made a very pleasant picture. Workmen were busy about, and the last touches were being put to the decorations; girls were arranging laurel boughs in front of the houses, and national emblems were being placed in position along the streets through which the procession was to pass. Special trains carried their freights from various parts of Ireland, and scarcely a place of importance in the country but had some representatives present. From Dorry and Belfast there came a goodly number, and all the southern towns sent large deputations; while the number of Dublin citizens participating in the demonstration was larger than had ever taken place at any gathering held outside of the metropolis. There were thirty members of Parliament present, all of them sympathizers with the builders of the new town. The English deputations were representative of all that is best and noblest in the political progress of that country. The great centres of Radical life in England were represented by some of their best known men, and a very large number of ENGLISH LADIES GRACED THE SCENE with their presence. Some curiosity existed in reference to the conduct of the authorities, as it was not quite certain what the action of our erratic rulers would be. The force of police which has, since the opening of the struggle, held Tipperary for Smith-Barry is a very large one, but it was considerably augmented, and contingents of armed men were drafted in from the outlying stations. The men were kept within their barracks, and the streets were left practically to the guardianship of the people, and with the usual result, that there was not the slightest trace of confusion, or even a suggestion of unruly or boisterous conduct. Three district inspectors took occasional saunters about the town, but otherwise the place may be said to have been free from the presence of the police. The train by which Mr. O'Brien and the deputations from England and Dublin travelled arrived at the Limerick Junction at 1 o'clock, at which time the platform was crowded. After a brief delay a procession was formed. There was a long line of carriages and wagnettes, in which were members of the various corporate bodies which had sent representatives, and these gentlemen were in nearly every case accompanied by the civic officers, bearing the emblems of corporate authority. The procession proceeded along the pleasant road which lies between the junction and the town of Tipperary, and along the two miles there was not a single policeman to be met. Even the smallest cottage which was passed on the way had some sign of rejoicing displayed, and in many instances the houses were decorated with evergreens. When the old town was reached a cheer- ing welcome was given to the visitors by the people who thronged the streets. As you enter the main street by the route you come in full view of one of the houses of the evicted merchants, which is now used as a police barrack, and here was being enacted. At the drawing room windows sat a government note taker, jotting down a description of the proceedings, and at his side was an old constable who made frantic efforts to manipulate a small camera, so that the police would be in a position to supply Dublin Castle with an illustrated report of the proceedings. The cheering was continued as the procession passed through William O'Brien street, and when it debouched into the new road which leads to the new town the acclamations of the multitude rang out with renewed enthusiasm. From such of the new houses as are inhabited the people waved a welcome. At the end of the Mart a low platform had been erected, and as many of the visitors as it was possible to accommodate were accommodated with places upon it. At the meeting Canon Cahill presided. The addresses were read to the visitors. One was short but expressive, and the other gave an exhaustive account of the struggle on the Smith-Barry property. It was read by Mr. Walter Dalton and created quite an impression upon all the visitors. The chairman then presented Mr. Picton, M. P., to the meeting. His speech was thoughtful and logical, and was heartily received. After Mr. Picton came Lady Sandhurst, who gave a sympathetic speech, full of kindly good feeling. The new town had next the good wishes of the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who was received with very hearty cheers. When Mr. Michael Davitt rose, the cheering broke out anew and continued for some moments. His speech was a short one, and at its opening he explained that he would only intervene for a few moments between the meeting and the "hero of the occasion." The fact that the first care of the committee had been to house the poorest of the evicted tenants won from Mr. Davitt a warm tribute of admiration. The reappearance of MR WILLIAM O'BRIEN in the thick of the fight was the signal for one of those wild outbursts of cheering that is heard nowhere except in Tipperary. The long exultant cry made the place echo and re-echo before the well known voice was heard calling out in tones full of intensity, "Men of Tipperary! The spirit which makes Mr. O'Brien's utterance so remarkable was not absent on such an occasion. The effort to make his voice heard by every man in the crowd soon had its effect, and the speaker was compelled to pause for a few moments amid the warm sympathy of the people. As a proof of the universality of the sympathy aroused by the struggle in Tipperary, it may be mentioned that Mr. O'Brien was commissioned by a Parisian lady, Madame Rafalovich (whose sympathy with Ireland is not of recent date), to hand to Father Humphreys a bank note of one hundred francs for a school feast for the school children of New Tipperary, to be distributed in equal portions between the children of the Christian Brothers' and convent schools. Mr. O'Brien's speech was, like the others, a brief one, and after concluding with the national aspiration, "God save Ireland," he sat down for a few minutes. This concluded the meeting, but the people did not disperse, for the ceremony of declaring the Mart open and making the people "free" of New Tipperary had yet to be fulfilled. This Mr. O'Brien performed in a few words, and the visitors were conducted through the Arcade, in which the dining tables for the evening banquet were laid. The interior of the building presented a gay aspect. The evergreens and the flags and banners quite transformed the place. After this ceremony had been completed luncheon was partaken of in Dobbyn's Hotel, and then a flying visit was made to Andrew Glen, famous in song and story, and now having a new interest added to its annals by the fact that at Ballykeena a strip of country has been taken for the purpose of accommodating Smith-Barry's evicted agricultural tenants. Banaha was inspected, famous as the scene of that world-known episode.

"THE PEELER AND THE GOAT," and the party returned to Tipperary, where the preparations for the banquet had been completed. At 6:30 the company began to assemble, and as there were more than six hundred present a number of Irish proverbs printed on long strips of paper, and the translation into English seen underneath, formed a very interesting and appropriate feature of the decorations. Among these proverbs were the following: "No nobility without virtue," "There is no joy without affliction," "Fame is more enduring than life," "Youthful Eire, Isle of Saints," "The word that admits no twisting," "Every demon runs his course," "The strong hand in the ascension," "By time everything is revealed," "For the glory of God and the honor of Ireland," "God's aid is nigher than the door," "The lie passes away, truth remains." On a dais running along at one side of the Arcade was the table at which were seated the principal guests. A row of some large plants lent a refreshing look to the table, and the mass of flowers which were arranged at intervals along the tables had also a very pleasing effect. The ends of the Arcade were draped in red and green in wide, alternate bands, and the roof was most hidden with flags and gay bunting. Outside the building, over the new clock erected by Chancellor & Son, were some illuminated gas devices, and at the opposite end of the building a similar decoration was exhibited. Mr. Schwann, M. P., it was who proposed the toast of "Propriety to New Tipperary," which, it is needless to say, was received with the greatest enthusiasm. The speech of Mr. Schwann, who represents one of the divisions of Manchester, was very interesting, and his whole-hearted sympathy with Ireland and the people of Tipperary was manifested in every word which he used. Mr. William O'Brien responded on behalf of New Tipperary, and his speech was cheered at almost every sentence.

THE TONE OF THE SPEECH

was jubilant in the extreme, and had about it that kind of satisfactory hopefulness which one feels when, having almost accomplished a very severe trial, within his reach. The allusions to the English visitors were happy and graceful, and the effect of their presence on the police authorities afforded the speaker an opportunity for some caustic comments on the bravery of the present governors of Ireland. The challenge which was given to the chief secretary was a most striking feature in the speech, and there was enormous earnestness in come over the views of the Irish people, and he thrilled the audience when he declared that miserable would be the guilt of those responsible if ever again their patience under outrage and wrong was to be considered as an admission that coercion had succeeded, and there was no means of obtaining reform except by resistance and bloodshed. The signs of the effect of Mr. O'Brien's method of answering his political opponents again made themselves manifest, and at length Mr. O'Brien had to accede to the request of the friends sitting near him, and conclude his speech. The national poet laureate, Mr. T. D. Sullivan, M. P., when he rose to read a poem which he had composed for the occasion, was received with a great outburst of hearty cheering. The poem was entitled "New Tipperary." It was an unusual experience to hear the least of "Ireland a Nation" proposed by an English member of Parliament, but certainly no more stirring and impassioned appeal on Ireland could have been delivered by any of her sons than the speech of Mr. Leake. He declared that Ireland is a nation, and had always been a nation, and gave in glowing language the reason for the faith that was in him. He drew a bright picture of the Ireland of the future, and the glory and the pride which her sons would take in the prosperity of the land which had suffered so long and so much. Mr. Leake touched upon the help which had been given to the CAUSE OF ENGLISH LIBERTY by the agitators of Ireland. The speech was applauded with great heartiness, and gave the greatest satisfaction to all the response to this toast was made by Michael Davitt, who addressed his audience as citizens of New Tipperary. The speech was a very logical and a very able one. Mr. Picton, M. P., was Mr. Davitt's colleague in responding to the toast, and he referred, as he confessed, with feelings of shame to the treatment which Mr. Davitt had endured at the hands of Englishmen, and added that day by day his countrymen were proving more and more ashamed of his episode. To Mr. John O'Connor, M. P., fell the task of proposing the toast of the English visitors, and no one can be better qualified for it, as he has, ever since the Irish members began to take part in election contests, visited almost every part of England, and has come in close contact with the leaders of public opinion all over the country. Mr. Brunner, M. P., Hon. Ashley Ponsonby and Mr. Morton, the secretary of the English Home Rule Association, responded. In an eloquent speech Mr. P. (all M. P.) proposed the toast of the "Sea-divided Island," which was appropriately responded to by Sir Thomas Edmonde, M. P., fresh from his expedition to the antipodes. After the formal toasts had been proposed and honored with the customary exultation, the Mart was deserted, and the visitors hurried to the special train in waiting. The opening of New Tipperary could not have been held under conditions which would leave a more lasting impression upon the minds of all who were present than those which characterized the proceedings of Saturday.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Joseph Kidd, Sr.

We regret to announce the death of this estimable Catholic gentleman, which occurred at Sioux City, Iowa, on Saturday last. He was formerly a resident of Dublin, Ont., and for many years prominent merchant and mill owner of Winton, and owned salt works at Goderich and Dublin. Two of his sons having left for Iowa to engage in business, Mr. Kidd left the town, and died, as stated. He will be deeply regretted by a large circle of friends in this district. For many years he was one of the most enterprising men in the neighborhood in which he lived, and was ever an honorable, kindly and charitable gentleman. He was always ready to contribute in a most liberal manner to all works connected with the Church. One of his sons, Mr. Joseph Kidd, jun., is at present the owner of the Goderich salt works. Deceased was also the father-in-law of Dr. James W. O'Sullivan, of Infantry, London. We extend to the family our heartfelt condolences in this sad affliction. The funeral took place on Monday at Sioux City, Iowa, where the interment took place for the present. Mrs. George Shaw, Port Austin, Mich. We regret to announce the death of Mrs. George Shaw, a resident of Port Austin, Michigan, but a native of this city. She was the third daughter of Mr. John Coleman, an old and very much esteemed resident of London South. The sad event occurred on Friday, 25th of April. She had been attacked with la grippe, pneumonia afterwards setting in, and despite the best medical care and tender nursing the disease proved fatal. Deceased leaves four children and a husband to mourn the loss of a good mother and faithful wife. The funeral took place on Sunday. High Mass for the repose of her soul was sung on the following Monday. During her illness Mrs. Shaw was attended by Rev. Father Kroll, and she had the happiness of receiving all the rites of the Church before she departed this life. She will be deeply regretted not only by the members of her own family and relatives but by a numerous circle of friends, by all of whom she was held in the greatest esteem for her many admirable qualities. She was truly a model Catholic mother, and we pray and hope the light of eternal glory will be the reward of her blameless life. Edward Hanlan, Nissouri. Mr. Edward Hanlan, one of the most highly respected young farmers of the Township of Nissouri, departed this life at his residence on Friday, 25th April, at the age of twenty-six years. He is the son of Mr. Edward Hanlan, one of the old residents of the village of Thamesford, North Oxford, of which county the deceased was a native. His death had been expected for some time, as he had been seriously ill for about six months. Mr. Edward Hanlan was a fervent and exemplary Catholic, and on his bed of illness he exhibited remarkable Christian fortitude and resignation. His illness was consumption. He leaves, to mourn his loss, a wife and infant child. The funeral, which took place on Sunday, 27th ult., was the largest which has been witnessed in the Township for many years. The funeral service was read in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Ingersoll, and a touching sermon was preached by Rev. Jos. P. Molphy, P. F., after which the remains of the deceased were taken to their last resting place and interred.

ST. MICHAEL'S CATHEDRAL.

It has been decided to make some extensive improvements in St. Michael's Cathedral, and the following gentlemen have been appointed a Committee to take the matter in hand: Hon. F.
