Devout, but Unmusical.

When "The State versus Linkhaw" was called, the Commonwealth of North Carolina appeared as the plaintiff, and an earnest Mothodus brother of Robeson County responded as the defendant. The latter had not broken any of the Ten Commandments, nor had he violated any written law of the land. His moral character was above suspicion, his piety was unquestioned, and it was conceded even by his persecutors that he was a law-abiding citizen, a member of the church in good standing, and a man of detect by the Grand Jury of Robeson county, found guilty of a misdeneauour by twelve of his peers, and the Supreme Court of North Carolina was called upon to determine whether the majesty of the law demanded that he should suffer punishment. It appears that Brother Linkhaw took and that while he laboured with fervour the produce harmony in the readering of the hymns, he contrived, unfortunately, thut unintentionally, all do him the justice to say, it ocreate a great deal of discord in the outgreated of the contrived in the plantice to say, to create a great deal of discord in the outgreated of the contrived into good fellowship and the committed that he was a finally brought in the summan of the truth is that shortly after bother Linkhaw had been received into good fellowship and the committed that the should be summan the summan of the congregation, nor to promote the good only of the brether and stater to many that his part in the service of ong was not calculated to give unmixed pea ure to the devout of the congregation, nor to promote the good only of divine worship which all had at heart. Gentle thints of this unwelcome truth were first thrown cut, and when no notice was taken of these it become necessary to bring sife delicate master openly to the account of the congregation, or to promote the good only of the congregation with one was a summan and a Christian to have a lite candon and the summan of the congregation with one was a summan of the congregation with one was a summan of the congregation with one was a summan of t MINIOUS INTERPRETATION OF PROPERTY SHOULD BE ANALYSIS OF PROPE

Listowel

Standard.

VOL. I.-NO. 52.

LISTOWEL, CO. PERTH, JANUARY 24, 1879.

HAWKINS & KELLS,

The Art of Enameling

science, art, and literature.

These legends are recalled by a small specimen of the artistic work of the modern Japanese, an example of the developed skill of which the foundations were laid in times so remote and under circumstances so peculiar. It is a round covered bowl of porcelain, curiously decorated with enamels in bright colours by the method now known as clossome.