"Along the east side there were high cliffs at the base of which the lower town was situated. The distance from the edge of the cliffs to high water mark was about 500 feet, and this was the only available piece of ground where Zeppelin sheds could be erected.
Whenever we used the guns in practice the concussion brought down tons of earth. I don't think it is any wonder that the Germans have made it a cement island.
British dreadnoughts could lie off Heligoland and level the lot in half an hour. A fact which serves to illustrate the exceedingly rotten condition of the island geologically is that about sixty yards from the main island there stands a pinnacle 200 feet high, which was undoubtedly at one time a part of Heligoland. Numbers of birds nest and lay their eggs there in the season.
>About 1800 miles from Heligoland there was a small island called Sandy Island, at the back of which the French fleet lay during the Franco-Prussian war.
Shortly after the Germans had defeated the French a German noble said to me, 'Some day the German fleet will lie at the back of Sandy Island, Heligoland will be a German possession, and the next thing we will do will be to have England.' I said to him, 'You had better come over to England, and we will give you a taste of our roast beef.' The first two boasts have come true, but the Germans haven't got England yet.
You will see however what they did in their minds even at that time. Very few English visitors used to go to Heligoland, and the German holiday makers even then began to look on it as a German possession."

On Board the Steamship via wireless via Steamship Dec. 13.—A resolution President Wilson's proposal brought a protest from the prominent members of the peace party last night was presented for adoption by the assembly. The resolution was drawn up by Jenkins L. Jones and the F. Aked, and others, who it is signed by all members of their platform. A dozen members, including Clure, of New York, and James B. Lindsay, refused the ground that the resolution was unpatriotic. Some threatened to leave the peace reached Europe, if he proposed was put through. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 100 to 10. The following appeal to of Europe was sent out by day, addressed to individuals, reigning monarch:
'Sir: We come in this trouble, not to add to you but to help lift them, not which nature are most to the disaster that has befallen but to end the strife, not ourselves upon your national ideals, but rather earnest desire to understand a heartfelt wish to aid in them.
The love of country thousands of lives for the same in every land. Your the people of all the other countries is fighting for its existence and its best national traditions, and its noble differences. Such ideals surely must afford a which to establish a magnanimous peace. The men of your country and
