QUIET HOUR CHATS.

By Laura Jean Libbey.

ENTERTAINING WHEN ONE CAN'T AFFORD IT.

By Laura Jean Libbey.

It is generally the woman whose husband is making but a slender salary—who has a household of daughters to marry off—who strains her purse to its utmost capacity to entertain lavishly, though she realizes by doing so she will experience the utmost difficulty in making both ends meet.

The husband despairingly tries to re-monstrate with her in a mild way. "One party one week, a sociable treat next, a euchre the following and a theatre party the next—what man in my position could stand it?" he groans.

But his wife is inexorable. "De you want your household of daughters old maids on your hands—like the family across the way?" she asks, grimly, knowing that one remark will settle the business, if she can only get it.

"I ask isn't it your duty to marry your daughters off suitably?" she goes on energetically. "And in order to do this young men must be brought around. Where they pass a delightful evening they will be sure to call again."

"But the fellows don't meet either girls here, at my expense, and go and marry them," he argues, warming up to his theme.

"Of course one must stand that chance," she responds, adding grimly, "but we are too careful to let that happen, if it is to be prevented. By that I mean we are careful never to invite girls here who will outshine our daughters; there's a great deal in that."

"If there was less money spent on ice-cream and cake for young people, there would be more good steaks on the table," he mutters, with a weary shake of the head.

"I can go without it, I guess you can," she argues.

"I have a man's work to do, and the money to earn," he retorts, and it comes hardest on a man when he gets half fed."

"One must make self-denials for a family of daughters," she responds. "Now listen to what I endure uncomplainingly, that the girls may have their pleasures. I have to wear old bonnets and turned and returned, season after season, until they are actually so shabby I am forced to buy new. I get the cheapest givings I can find, and pay her scarcely living wages. I don't buy the choice things in the market, but I must make out at all."

"I watch the advertisements of sales for bargains, and buy almost everything at less than cost," as they phrase it. "I walk up and down town to save paying five cents car fare each way. The girls and I have so many acquaintances, we generally find it convenient to drop in about lunch time. I don't mean all together, I mean one here and one there. These are an immense saving in the expenditure of money for the noonday luncheon, for the girls cannot curtail their appetites."

"There is no end in the way a woman has to pinch and save to give a few entertainments during the year when she has marriageable daughters."

"He cannot see that any of the girls has caught a beau from her. As a result, she has a very useful husband, and she is doing."

"But, between you and me, dear reader, it is a poor scheme."

A Door Key Started the Crimean War.
As an instance of what great events can follow trivial happenings, the genesis of the Crimean War is interesting.

In 1851 Louis Napoleon demanded of the Sultan that the Latin monks should have a key to the great door of the church at Bethlehem; that they should have a key to each of the doors of the Cave of the Nativity and the privilege of setting up a statue of the Virgin Mary in the arms of France.

After a year of arduous negotiation Turkish Government yielded, and in February, 1853, the keys were handed over to the Latin monks and the silver star was established in the sanctuary of Bethlehem.

Unfortunately, the Emperor Nicholas, as head of the Greek Church, considered this an infringement of his rights and immediately ordered 150,000 men across the Turkish frontier. At the same time he demanded that the claims of the Christian population of Turkey should be secured by treaty with himself, but the Sultan refused this, with the support of France, Austria and Prussia.

The central European countries attempted to secure a compromise, but neither party would agree to their mediation, and in October the Sultan declared war.

England and France joined him, and so, from such slight beginnings, sprang the most merciless, bloody and fruitless struggle of the nineteenth century.

Conversation of Chiropractic Enthusiast.
"My husband," said the lady who combed her hair straight from her brow, used to waste words a good deal, but he has gradually outgrown the habit since he and I have known each other.

"And how has this happened?" the other woman asked.

"It has just been a sort of natural development. Evolution, you might perhaps call it. The first letter he ever wrote me was shortly after we had become acquainted and before there was really anything like an understanding between us. This is the way he signed it:

"Yours, my dear Miss Weston, most sincerely,

"JOHN HAMILTON EASTON.

"There, you see, were ten words—enough for a telegram—just to bring a commonplace friendly letter to an end. But after we became engaged his first letter to me was signed in this way:

"Yours, my darling, affectionately,

JOHN.

That, you will observe, was a reduction of 50 per cent. from his conclusion as a mere friend. The first letter he ever wrote to me after we were married was signed:

Yours,

JOHN.

She stopped for a moment and sighed and then continued:

"We have been married seventeen years now. Yesterday I received a letter from him. Here is the way it was signed: 'J.'"

It is stated on pretty good authority that Hon. J. C. Patterson, Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba, whose term expires at the end of September, has purchased the fine property known as Rosebank, at Gordon, near Amherstburg, for many years the residence of J. H. Morgan. If the report be correct it looks as if Mr. Patterson intended once more taking up his residence in Essex.—Comber Herald.

THE ROUGH BLOW.
The steamer Imperial was compelled to leave the West Dock, Pelee Island, at about 1.30 Tuesday afternoon. A fierce storm came up and Captain McCormick, decided to cut loose and get away without passengers and freight. The wind was such that he could not make north dock, so he headed for Put-in-Bay. The wind dashed the water into sheets 20 feet high. Capt. McCormick says it was the most sudden and fiercest wind storm he ever saw on Lake Erie.

From the time he left the Island until they reached Bar Point the decks of the Imperial were constantly washed. There was little rain. The mail from Pelee (West) was brought up, but the North mail was missed.—Amherstburg Echo.

Have you Catarrh Taint?—Here's strong evidence of the quickness and sureness of that wonderful remedy, Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. For years was a victim of chronic catarrh—tried many remedies, but no cure was effected until I procured and used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. First application gave me instant relief, and in an incredibly short while, I was absolutely cured.—Jas. Headley, Dundee, N. Y. Price, 50 cts. Sold by J. W. McLarn.—I.
