To the Editor of the Times: Sir, -The more I read your valuable paper the greater is the surprise. And I often wonder why did Robert Burns not mention women in his never to be forgotten remarks of 'Man was made to mount' as seen better different at the second mourn," or, even better still, "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." Well, just as I told you in a previous letter, that I was 1000 you in a previous letter, that I was under the impression that an injustice had been done in reference to the con-viction of Walsh and Hildreth. I was so convinced that those two victims of fate were giving a truthful statement that I have taken it upon myself to make a little private investigation, and up to row I find that their statement is only too true. I would like to ask you, Mr. Editor, if it is within the mean.
