TWO YOUTHS ARE ON TRIAL FOR LIVES

Murder Cases of Henry C. Beattie and Paul Geidel Opened.

Chesterfield Court House, Va., Aug. 21.—With the jury selected and the witnesses for both sides subpoenaed, the trial of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., of Richmond, indicted for wife murder, began today with the opening of the prosecution's case.

The first witness for the commonwealth was Thomas Owen, uncle of the murdered young wife, summoned to testify that Beattie brought the body to the Owen home with a story of a man in the roadway firing into his automobile and killing Mrs. Beattie. The prosecution has a list of more than seventy other witnesses, most of whom will be used in sketching Beattie's life and in an effort to build a motive for the crime.

Beulah Binford, the seventeen year old girl, said to have come between the prisoner and his wife, remains in jail at Richmond, as a material witness.

New York, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The prosecution scored a point yesterday afternoon at the trial of Paul Geidel, a "bell" boy accused of killing Wm. H. Jackson, an aged Wall street broker. Part of the verbal confession alleged by the police to have been made by the seventeen year old defendant was placed before the jury after Judge Crain has over ruled an objection of the defense counsel.

Detective Jeremiah Barber testified that young Geidel had admitted the ownership of a blood-stained handkerchief found in the room of the broker.

Questions put by James A. Grey, Geidel's counsel to Coroner's Physician Lehan seemed to indicate that the defense would try to prove that Mr. Jackson died of heart failure.

THE FIRST YUM CARD

Started by a Duke in Brantford in 1861.

At a dinner given by Duke Henry of Brantford in 1861 he was seen to carry a card which he placed on the table of his plate. One of the Duke's guests asked what the paper was. The Duke explained that it was a card of appreciation or catalogue of the dishes he had commended from the cook. The intent that if some delicacy which specially appealed to his appetite were marked for a later stage in the report, he might carefully re-prepare the appetite for it. The simplicity and utility of the idea at once took the fancy of the Duke and the menu card from that moment became an institution. The Duke's fashion was so much admired it spread far and near, and was adopted in England and France at once.

WANTS TO GO FOR A TIP

For Giving Information About His Property in Bronx.

Thirteen years ago, on a New York park bench, Thomas Corrigan told Patrick Goff about unclaimed property in the Bronx that belonged to a cousin, Henry Goff, who had been drowned leaving no immediate heirs. On the strength of the tip, Goff not only secured possession of property worth $250,000, but he is now suing for $100,000, which he says Goff promised him. Goff says he never promised any such thing, but gave Corrigan $50.

REAL GOLD BRICKS.

Min. Erected on Ancient Gold Mine in India.

Gold bricks, real ones, may be the means of restoring the ancient frame of Golconda, near Hyderabad, in southern India, once known all the world over for its gold mines, but now a decayed city. The natural pits from which many centuries ago the precious metal was extracted have in course of time filled up with water. A contractor recently obtained permission to make bricks near the place from which many centuries ago the precious metal was extracted have in course of time filled up with water. AFRICANS LIKE UNIFORMS.

Much money is made out of cast-off police uniforms. Quantities are bought by African traders and exported to various parts of the "Dark Continent" where they are exchanged for palm-oil, ivory, skins, and other merchandise. It is by no means an uncommon sight to see a swarthy savage dressed in the uniform of a policeman, and wearing the regulation helmet of the force.

Stories of the Prince of Wales.

Many quaint and amusing anecdotes are related of the Prince of Wales as a small child, one being that he and his sister and brothers were invited out to tea at some Court lady's house, and when the hour for departure came he could nowhere be found to say good-bye to his hostess. On investigation it was discovered that he had hurried downstairs alone to secure what he considered his proper place in the carriage. It is also reported of him that, on his first attending afternoon church one Sunday, he remembered how often he had been told to thank his entertainers for their hospitality; so on this occasion he looked anxiously about for someone to be grateful to. The only person who came handy was the verger, who, rather to the prince's confusion, had his hand grasped by the little prince, and was informed in a childish voice: "Thank you so much for a very pleasant afternoon!"

Ben's Logic.

"Ben," said his friend, waking up from a reverie in which he had been gazing abstractedly at the shiny expanse of Ben's skating-rink for a while, "there's nothing you could do for your baldness?" "Ben, by the way, is only forty." "No, lad!" he replied, with decision. "Fifteen years ago I was coming strong, and I tried lots of things. But about that time t' Prince of Wales—Edward, you know—came to open t' new hospital, and I said to myself as soon as ever I saw his hair, I'd cut it off. Well, he did, but he can't give it up as a bad job, and save his brass. If it was cut off, he'd cure a bald head they'd have cured him!"

MAID ON FATHER.

Ground Season is Opened Again and Papa Knows.

As the ground season is opened again, Papa knows. One notices it first when the young ladies come from college. He sits in the afternoon and walks across the lawn so as not to disturb the ladies. He waves his hand as they pass, and he waves his hand as they pass. He waves his hand as they pass, and he waves his hand as they pass.

THE KING'S THRONE.

Hard to Say Which is the Most Comfortable.

The King may be said to be seated on a throne of thrones—or shall we say a set of "occasional thrones"—one of which he probably sits on at any one time. Certainly he only sits on a throne on one occasion out of the year. It is the Coronation Chair in Westminster Abbey—the worn, ancient, oak, four-footed old oak settee which contains the Stone of Destiny upon which all the Kings of England since Edward II. have been crowned. That chair might be said to claim to be the throne of the King, as it is infinitely the most and the most important of the thrones upon which he sits.

BRITISH STANDARD BEARER.

Lieutenant Harrison, the tallest officer in the British Army, will carry the standard of the Royal Horse Guards Blue in the Coronation procession. The standard was presented to the Blues by King William III. on August 13th, 1831, Queen Adelaide's birthday. The last time it was carried was the first Jubilee of Queen Victoria, when the Queen went from Slough to Windsor.

Swat That Fly.

The transmission of disease by the fly is no longer a mere theory, but is a truth that has been scientifically established. Keep the flies out of your house. Get screens for the doors and the windows. Be on guard all the time. Keep screens over articles of food. Don't let flies get near the pantry, kitchen or diningroom. Be doubly careful about keeping flies out of the sickroom. They are likely not only to bring complications of new diseases, but to carry the invalid's disease to many others. Those who put in their screens promptly will be taking the best precaution against having disease germs introduced into their homes by flies.

Her Habit.

"What do you think the young wife of old Moneybags has developed into?" She is always crossing or recrossing the ocean. She certainly keeps the transatlantic line busy. You know, she was formerly a telephone girl.

McGARVIE-MCKINNON

At Shannonvale on the evening of August 16th an unusually pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William McKinnon when their daughter, Miss W. McKinnon, was united in matrimony to Mr. Duncan McGarvie. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. B. Kirk in the presence of about ninety invited guests. As the wedding march was being played by Miss Ethel May of Head of Tide, the bride, who was attired in white silk trimmed with all-over lace and insertion, carried a bouquet of sweet peas. She entered the parlor bearing in her arm of her father and took her place by the side of the organ, beneath a pretty arch of orange and red flowers. After an interval for congratulations the guests were conducted to the station dining room where a substantial supper was served, after which a most enjoyable time was spent by all. The large number of useful and costly presents testified to the general popularity of both bride and groom. The groom's present to the bride was a gold brooch set with pearls.
