A Visit to the Royal Arsenal.

My attention was now directed to a range of workshops, in which such a clatter of banging and thumping was going on, accompanied by clouds of smoke and steam, that I did not like to venture in. These were the headquarters of the great Armstrong, whose name, not long ago knew beyond Newcastle, has now become a household word to many nations. Bob surprised me by saying that so great was the secret of this invention, that even the gallant artillery general who then commanded at Woolwich was not allowed to witness the process of manufacture. He and his staff were one day actually seen waiting outside this very workshop, while some foreign princes who happened to be provided with a special order from our Government, were admitted, and had everything explained to them. But the whole thing is well known to everybody now. It is supposed that other nations do not manufacture them, either because they think they have a better gun of their own, or that they have not the machinery or mechanics to make them. Outside the factory, men were busy unloading waggons filled with bars of tough looking iron, about twelve feet long and two inches broad; inside, these bars were joined together by welding than placed in an oven till red hot, and afterwards drawn out and would like a rope around an iron drum, thus forming a coil of metal. A little further, we saw this coil in its second stage; it had been again heated in a furnace, and the Nasmyth hammer was now forcing the iron into one mass, till it became a cylinder of unbroken metal; two of these cylinders were then hammered together, and so on till the rough gun was complete. I must not, however, omit to mention one of the centre coils, to which were attached the arms of trunnions which supported the gun upon its carriage. The hammering of this mass was completed in another foundry; and when we arrived it had already been well beaten, and was just about to issue once more from its furace for another welding. A long iron bar, as a handle, was fastened to it; and on opening the furnace door, there it lay, so white with heat, we could scarcely look at it. Twenty men now seized the bar, a crane was set to work and the glowing metal emerging from its den, was carefully laid down upon its iron bed, under the most ponderous hammer I had ever seen; it came down with a crash that made the ground tremble under our feet, and is so powerful that it is capable of stricking a blow of 200 tons, notwithstanding which it can be managed with such delicacy as to crack a nut without bruising the kernal. It is said that 1,000 tons of different material were laid down to form the foundation for the bed, but the soil being marshy a tremulous motion is felt at a great distance. At the first blow we were covered with sparks, which, however, became fewer as the metal cooled; the heat found a refuge in the twenty workmen. Poor fellows! how they perspired and how exhausted they were when, after a good hammering, our friend was returned to his den for another heating. Half cooked and half stunned, I followed Bob through many other factories where these guns were being turned, and rifled, and drilled. I do not, however, remember much about them, except that I brought away with me a beautiful long curl, which had been culled, not from the locks of the chief engineer, but from the pate of a brawney Armstrong who was being Bantingized down to his proper size by a steel chisel, which stuck to the helpless creature like a leech, and from which there was no escape. How pretty the baby Armstrongs were as I saw them, spick and span in the finishing room, where men with delicate hands and accute vision were giving them their last touch prior to their being removed to the proving butt! The large ones are tested by firing off a bar of iron weighing 1,000 lbs., and if they stand the test of such an explosion ten times without injury they are considered fit for use.—[London Society.

Miserable End of a Miserly Baroness.

The Paris papers report that the commissary police of the quarter of the Place Vendome, accompanied by a doctor, recently visited the apartment of a baroness, in order to certify, at the request of the inmates of the house, the death of the lady, who was seventy five years of age. The appearance of the apartment indicated extraordinary neglect. There was scarcely any furniture; the dust of years obscured the window panes, and the paper on the wall was spotted and rotten. The place appeared to have been uninhabited from time immemorial, and yet the baroness had lived there for twenty-five years paying an annual rent of 1,500f. In the bed room, streatched upon a truckle bed, and partly covered with filthy rags, lay the body of the baroness. An examination showed that death arose from weakness caused by want of food. It further appeared that she had starved herself wilfully; and indeed in point of avarice the baroness would have borne away the palm from Harpagon or Gosbeck. Notwithstanding her considerable fortune, estimated at £50,000 a year, she always went clothed like a beggar, and often solicited charity in the street. She lived on crusts of bread, the refuse of cabbages and other vegetables, and such like garbage that she picked up from dirt heaps. A few days before her death she fell down from weakness, while passing the door of the concierge, from want of food; but she refused to take some refreshment proffered to her, no doubt fearing that she would have to pay for it.—She succeeded in gaining her apartment, and was not afterwards seen alive.

CHEESE FACTORIES.

The demand for American cheese in Europe has greatly increased since the establishment of cheese factories in which it is made on scientific principles, and of a superior quality. The consequence is that such factories are multiplying rapidly, and the keeping of cattle to supply them is extending in similar proportion. This will rapidly improve the soil, and increase its yield of other crops, so that what appears at first sight only to affect one branch of the farming interest, really affects all.

But it is clear that nearly the same improvement would take place in butter that has taken place in cheese, were it also made in factories. The great drawback to Canadian butter is store-packing; that is, taking in lumps of many different qualities from many different farmers, and packing them almost promiscuously in kegs. In this way there are different qualities and colors in the same keg, and the whole has to be sold at the rate for the worst. Nay, if there are a hundred kegs, with five or ten kegs of this description among them the whole are likely to go at the value of the worst sample. Even when kegs are taken home by the farmer to be filled and brought back to the store, they are filled by successive churnings, and are consequently nearly always inferior to kegs filled at one churning.

If the milk of 100 farmers, having an average say of ten milch kine, each, was sent to a factory, there would of course be the milk of 1,000 cows every morning and evening to convert into butter and cheese, as might be deemed most profitable. Farmers having fine, clean old pastures, and choice cows, would probably find it most profitable to have their milk converted into butter, whilst others would find is most for their advantage to make cheese. In either case the article manufactured would be of the best quality, and command the very highest price; thus yielding the farmer a considerably greater net return, with very much less trouble, and at the same time greatly augmenting the value of our exports, and the productive power of our soil.—Witness.

LOSS OF APPETITE IN HORSES.—Horses lose their appetite from various causes, but most frequently by the approach of some disease, this circumstance ought not to be overlooked by those who own horses, but should be immediately attended to, as by so doing the disease may be checked, and the life of the horse saved. To do which we are positive there is nothing equal to "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it purifies the blood, corrects all derangements of the digestive organs, and as a necessary consequence the appetite is restored, the skin becomes soft, and the coat assumes a soft and shining appearance.

Remember the name, and see that the that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

Mothers Read This—Holloway's Worms Lozenges are a certain and safe remedy for Worms in Children and Adults.—As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.—The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, and frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, tremblings, coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh.

They are palatable and self-administered to the child—drive out the worms thoroughly without pain, and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics—as in the use of other worm medicine.

☞ Each box contains the fac-simile signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.
