The Evening Chit-Chat

By HETTY CAMERON

Visiting is considered by some people a recreation, by others an intolerable bore. As a matter of fact, neither is right. Visiting is really a fine art.

Incidentally it is a fine art that few people ever acquire, but a few ever acquire the companion art of receiving a visitor gracefully.

All of which is merely by way of prelude to this: Since this is the visiting season, doubtless your daughter—"you," meaning, of course, mothers with daughters of visiting age, is going visiting. Maybe this is her first visit without you.

If that is the case, may I suggest that the night before daughter goes a-visit you do upstairs with her when she starts for bed and have a nice little heart-to-heart talk with her?

And may I also suggest one or two things that you say in that talk? Thank you.

If daughter is going into a home where the mother and daughters of the household do all or part of the housework, impress upon her that she must do all she can to help without being obtrusive about it.

Remind her that by the way she takes care of her room, arranges her clothes, airs her bed, etc., not only she, but her mother will be judged.

If she has any parlor tricks—such as skill at the piano or a pretty voice ask her to be not eager, but always ready to use them. Explain to her that while an eagerness to show off an accomplishment is egotistical, the reluctance that has to be unrolled and urged is really quite as much a sign of vanity, and that if one really can give pleasure any way one should be modestly glad to do it.

Tell her how everybody hates the guest who wants to be on the go every instant, and that the best guest is one who can be left alone occasionally and still be happy, and see that she has packed some interesting reading or some embroidery to fill in the chinks between other amusements.

Impress upon her that though she may be visiting the young people in a family, she should not forget that the older people are really her hosts, and should not fall to be as deferential and courteous and interested in their interests as she can be.

Have a little general talk with her on the American Girl's disagreeable proneness to thrust herself and her guests and dislikes and opinions altogether too much into the foreground, and tell her that you hope she will give her hosts and her new friends a chance to say, "Here is an American girl who isn't forward."

And last of all, just before you tuck her in and kiss her good-night, tell her that if she really wants to make a good impression the best way is to go, thinking of the people she is going to meet, and not of the people who are going to meet her.

And if she follows out half your program, daughter will surely be the highroad to acquiring the fine art of visiting.

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health. The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune.

Womanly health, when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 30 years, been saving delicate, weak, pale, nervous women, by the hundreds of thousands, and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to delicate questionings and officiously repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in plain English lists of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

Fads and Fashions.

Suit jackets are all short. White ratine is being used on silk suits. For bridesmaids, lace caps are in vogue.

Hats are placed at every angle on summer hats. Both large and small hats are trimmed with lace. A summer novelty is a canvas coat embroidered in wool.

The vogue for the separate collar is still at its height. Green parrots seem to have first place in fashion's favor.

Rarely do we see a silk dress entirely of one kind of material. Lace bags over colored silk linings are carried with evening gowns.

Forest-green is used to form complete crowns on lingerie hats. Sailor collars of satin, or silk, are now veiled with black or white chiffon.

Plain ribbons have a following, but figured ones are undoubtedly in the lead. On separate coats the sailor collar is very noticeable. It must be very deep.

The medium and high waistline will unquestionably be continued over the summer. Much favor is being shown checked ribbons, and the latest have alternate checks of satin.

Lingerie trills on the cuffs of sheer linen blouses falling over the hands are worn with street suits. Delicate combinations of turquoise or shell pink with lavender are more exquisitely blended than ever before.

The controlling feature in waist fashions is the continued use of the matching, or so-called "costume" bodice. In costumes and separate blouses the sleeves are almost without exception short-sleeved and three-quarters length.

Black satin wraps are demanding much attention. For dress occasions satin has no rival, both for suits, wraps and costumes. Broad collars are an important feature in both the tailored suits and separate wraps of light-weight worsteds, silks and linens.

Limerick 1 a c e, Carriackacross, Buckinghamshire and all French and German exploitations are in the ranks to be used this summer. The newest skirt may be termed circular and is slightly fuller. It is however, straight and will still give a woman the narrow long line.

Practically every weave from the wispiest of chiffons, nets and muslins to flannels, norges, and foulards are decorated with borders. When making up cheap satin line it with a very thin flannel, as this gives it a much richer appearance and prevents it from creasing.

Body of Infant Found.

While three little boys were playing at the margin of Quidi Vidi Lake last evening, in the neighbourhood of the T. A. Boat House, they saw an object floating in the water near, and becoming curious investigated. On going close to it they saw that it was an old bed sack and protruding from it were the feet of an infant which was wrapped up in the sack. Coming to the city the boys notified Sgt. Mackey who proceeded to the Lake, secured the little body and placing it in a box took it to the morgue where it now is. The remains were in an advanced stage of decomposition, and the police will endeavor to find, if possible, the mother of the infant.

Shipwrecked Seamen Coming.

The captain and crew of the Damaraland who after their ship foundered were brought into Barbadoes by fishing vessels, are now on their way here. The vessel was bound from Pernambuco to this port when in heavy weather she sprang a leak and had to be abandoned. She was owned by Mr. Geo. Neal.

Firemen Get Increase.

The firemen of the Florizel were given the advance in wages asked for by them, before the ship sailed Saturday. They were receiving $20, but now will get $25 per month. They will also be paid here instead of at New York as heretofore, and this will be of much benefit to the men and their families.
