topgh-Riders Who Sign on for "The Colonel" Will Have Their Hands

Who'd like to go for a trip through healthy country swarming with big game and with all expenses paid by the Government?

Intending applicants, in response to this unique offer, would do well to call at 6 Adam Street, Strand.

In a small office upstairs they will discover a strongly-built Irishman, whose black hair and moustache em phasize the grim determination of a face as implacable as Fate. The room is littered with papers and letters, and all day long-from every corner of the Empire-keen-visaged men call upon the solitary occupant.

But Colonel Driscoll, D.S.O., is use to hard work, of the kind which would wear an ordinary man down in a nonth. In South Africa he is known as "the man who sleeps with one eye open"; and so stupendous is his present task that it is a wonder that he is able to sleep at all.

A representative of Answers managed to secure from him, in a hurried interview, the following facts: "The War Office has just given me permission to raise a battalion of 1,000 men for active service against the Kaiser's forces in Africa. "When I tell you that the men have to be good rifle shots, to begin with, and must be able to pass an exceptionally severe medical test, and that the corps is expected to leave England in a few weeks' time, you will have some idea of the magnitude of my task. A good many of my old scouts,' who served under me in the Boer War, have joined me. One officer reached me yesterday who had actually travelled all the way from Zoutansberg, 6,000 miles off, giving up position worth £800 a year to come!

"Our work will largely consist of guerilla warfare, and the Government are equipping us in special uniforms suitable to the tropics. We shall be officially known as the 'Frontiersmen's 5,000 of these men down on my register in the early weeks of the war, but in the long waiting for official sancion most of them joined other corps.

"Many famous hunters and travellers have joined me, including Messrs. Frank Selous, Cherry Kearton and G. pero sails to-morrow morning for the big freight offering.

would say 'Come along.' "Where we are going is swarming with big game of all sorts, and at night we shall have to take as much precaution to guard against lions as we shall against the enemy."

The gallant colonel declined to talk for filling. about himself, but an old comrade. who fought by his side in South Afventure, spoke thus of the chief:

"The colonel will get his 1,000 men all right. His name alone will be sufficient to bring in dozens of old comrades who, like himself, would not serve under any other leader. He is the stain and leave on for an hour or any means, but is just right for those forwarded in due course. Albert a born leader, too. He was a captain Matthews enlisted with the Ottawa in the Upper Burma Volunteers at the time, and, proceeding by himself to the front, he was attached by the late General Gatacre, who knew his worth to the Frontier Mounted Rifles.

"This corps refused to fight out of Cape Colony, and so Captain Driscoll called for volunteers, and raised his
