TACTICS TO BE USED TO ATTAIN
EFFICIENCY IN RING PERFORMANCE.

(By ROBERT EDGREN for Bell Syndicate)

Georges Carpentier said of Dempsey: "They told me he could not box, but he is the best boxer I ever saw." I've often heard people say that Dempsey can't box; that he is just a big strong fellow who hits hard. That seems to be a general impression, founded on nothing more than the fact that Dempsey doesn't stand in the old pose of the Jim Mace school, hold his left arm out nearly straight in front of him, with the right pressed against his side, elbow crooked and glove laid across his stomach to act as a bumper if he's hit there.

My own opinion is that if Jack Dempsey can't box, Bob Fitzsimmons and Stanley Ketchel didn't know a glove from a horse shoe. Dempsey has much of Fitzsimmons and Ketchel in his action, with trimmings of his own thrown in.

Up in the Maine woods on a hunting trip there was plenty of time to chat, so I asked Dempsey for his notion of boxing.

"Well," said Jack, "there are only two things in boxing. One is to hit the other fellow, and the other is to keep him from hitting you."

THE CHEEK BONE PUNCH.

"Another reason why a body punch is the best punch is that now-a-days most fighters don't think of anything but socking the other bird on the chin and most any boxer covers his chin fairly well."

"If I want to hit 'em on the chin I hit 'em on the body first to bring their guard down or make them bend over to where they'll be easy to hit. It never bothered me to fight tall men. They come down to my height when I double them up with a body blow. Sometimes that one punch is enough. One punch in the solar plexus dropped Carl Morris on his nose."

In an ordinary scrap between fellows who aren't professional boxers the one who can deliver a body punch wins. A fellow who isn't a boxer never expects a body punch and has no defence for it.

"The knockout punch on the head that everybody knows about is the chin. But maybe you notice that I often land my first head punch a little high—on the cheekbone, maybe. That's because I'm trying to drop one over just above the eye tooth and at the side of the nose—a better knockout point than the chin if you reach it."

"If your punch is chopping down it may graze the chin, and a grazing punch on the chin is a better K.O. sock than a punch square on the button."

"Another nice point for a punch is back of the ear at the base of the skull. A hard wallop there may be dangerous, but a few little chops just make a fellow woozy so he doesn't know where he is, and then the finishing is easy."

"That's what got Carpentier. I liked Georges and didn't want to mark him when I knocked him out. Of course knocking him out was part of the game, same as it would be for him to knock me out if he could."

Landing punches is a matter of making your man move the way you want him to, so he'll leave openings, and keep him in position to hit when you get the chance."

"Take that fight at Toledo. Lots of people say a fighter can't tell how he'll fight until the fight starts. Of course a fighter can't be so dumb that he won't change his plans if he sees a better way to win, but I never go into a fight without coming pre-ty near knowing what the other fellow will do and what I'll do to fool him and beat him to it."

"At Toledo I knew Willard would stand up and wait for me to come in, cock-sure I'd rush him and he'd uppercut me."

"Well, you always want to do what the other guy doesn't want you to do. Willard wanted to let me lead and let him counter. So instead of leading I turned my back on him two or three times as if I was afraid of him, and walked away a couple of steps."

"He changed his plan and stepped out after me, and I turned and went under his arm as he jabbed and tormented him."

"It's almost as important to get away from punches as to do the socking. Nothing tires and discourages a fighter like missing with good punches. He feels like Babe Ruth when Babe expects to poke one over the right field fence and strikes out. I used to tie my hands down so I couldn't hit, and then having my sparring partner try to sock me. I had to duck and move around or take a poke on the nose, and I don't care any more for being hit than anyone else. I'm not crazy."

"I learned how to keep moving so my chin would be a bad target. That saying stuff gets me inside and when you get inside one of these big fellow's punches you have him as helpless as a turtle turned on its back."

"Besides, swaying and ducking around the way I do lets me pull away with a punch if it does land, and takes all the kick out of it."

Skin Eruptions

Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowels to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so it cannot gripe. Try it today.

"The Journey's End" A Cinema Novelty.

NICKEL SCORES ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

A rare treat is promised patrons of the Nickel Theatre who attend tonight's show.

"The Journey's End" is a Hugo Ballin production released by Hodkinson and represents one of the distinct cinema novelties of the current season, inasmuch as it is the first serious drama ever made without a single sub-title from "beginning to end." And yet critics of reviewing this splendid production declare it to be a marvel of clearness, and the story is said to unfold with the utmost lucidity despite the absence of explanatory titles.

There are three Mammoth Star attractions coming to the Nickel shortly namely "In Old Kentucky," featuring Anita Stewart, Norma Talmadge, "The Sign on the Door" and Jackie Coogan in his greatest picture "My Boy." Be sure and see these productions.

The Thirck Railway Disaster.

One of the most disastrous and pathetic accidents that has ever happened on an English railway was that which occurred at Thirck, on the Northeastern Line on November 2, 1882. The second part of the Great Northern East Coast route express left Edinburgh at eleven o'clock on the night of November 1, on its long run to town. Early next morning, when going at the rate of nearly sixty miles an hour between Otterington and Thirck, in Yorkshire, it dashed into a goods train that had just started from the signal station at Manor House junction, with the result that ten passengers were killed, and thirty-nine seriously injured. The leading third class carriage of the express was broken into pieces, while six other carriages were wrecked, and the brake van of the goods train and eight trucks were destroyed by the fire which broke out near the engine soon after the accident. It was thought that the train had been fired by the compressed gas which the vehicles were lighted, but investigation proved that the outbreak was due to the wreckage igniting at the engine fire. The signalman on duty at the Manor House box it appeared had been unnerved by the death of his child, and had asked to be relieved, but was refused; he had fallen asleep from fatigue, and so was responsible for the accident. Tried at York Assizes for manslaughter, he was found guilty, with a recommendation to mercy. Mr. Justice Charles thought he had been punished enough; the fact scared his mind for life, that his negligence had caused the disaster, and when the Judge merely ordered him to come up for judgment if called upon, the old Court House rung with cheers.

Star Movie Friday.

WONDERFUL STORY, "THE FOX."

The story is one that Carey has wanted to produce for ten years. He wrote it, gathering most of the material from his wealth of picturesque experiences on the Western range. It embodies all of those qualities that count—fans have told Carey they liked most. Carrying a dramatic punch and a quivering thrill of suspense in every one of its surprising twists, it sweeps everything before it in its swift rush of plot—its blow upon blow of the most absorbing situations ever devised. And through all of the vigorous action and thrills and spectacle runs a thread of sentiment that binds the interest with a strength as powerful and as satisfying as human sympathy itself. Step by step the story builds—now tense, now humbly humorous, now thrilling, now humanly tender—and all pyramiding up to a climax that will leave any audience in the world breathless—and satisfied! Don't miss it.

Household Notes.

To insure better blending when making cocoa, add the sugar to the cocoa after the cocoa and water have been cooked together.

A high stool should have a place of honor in every kitchen. Many tasks can be done with sitting down and many a backache be saved.

Make it a rule to ask the butcher for the trimmings from your meat purchases. The bones make good soup and the fat may be used for frying.

When a tin can has been emptied, immediately turn the cover down and so that it will not be the cause of accidental cuts before it is thrown away.

When the family gets tired of plain pumpkin pie, spread the pies with damson plum jam and whipped cream. They will ask for this dessert again.

If you wish your fruit cake to be smooth for icing, line the tin with plain batter before pouring it in and afterward spread the top with plain batter.

This is an excellent time to watch for Christmas "opportunities." Odds and ends can be purchased at prices, while there is plenty of time to use them.

Cauliflower cooked with cheese is a delicious combination which people know about. Prepare as you would potatoes au Gratin, using cheese.
