The Nissouri Murder.

Trial of Thomas Coyle.

LONDON, Oct. 8.

C. NICHOLS, a reporter, deposed to the admissions made by Coyle during his last interview with Mrs Campbell, the day before she was executed. The evidence of the witness went to show that Coyle had been to St. Mary's on the Saturday before the murder. Mrs Campbell urged him to tell the truth but he said he could not do so, perhaps if he had to go to the scaffold he might or he might not. She questioned Coyle as to how he got out of her father's house that night, and he answered by the window, and back by the door, or vice versa. The witness did not know which. They mutually upbraided each other as being the cause of the trouble they were in, Coyle saying "Phoebe, if it had not been for you this would not have happened."

The learned counsel again went over the question of the note, but elicited no more facts than those disclosed at Mrs. Campbell's trial.

ISAAC SMITH, deposed—Two weeks before the murder the prisoner came to witness' house and asked him if he cared about selling a pistol that he had; witness said he did not want to part with it. Mr. McKenzie, after consulting with his colleague, Mr. Warren Rock, announced that he would rather not call any more witnesses on behalf of the prosecution.

JOSEPH McWAIN, sworn, said that Coyle went to bed about dark; very confident of no person leaving his house that night, at least up to one o'clock; thought no one could get out of the window without outside assistance; it is 9 feet from the ground and the walls are very rotten; Coyle got up in the morning about four o'clock, and was then wearing the same clothes he wore when he went to bed.

Cross-examined by Mr Mackenzie—Could not tell how the pistol produced got to Campbell's house; was told that one of the Bumballs had been to St. Mary's on the day the pistol was bought; did not see Coyle come into the house that day; he had no recollection of his son saying "What if Coyle should tell all" or of witness saying that Coyle was not such a fool; remembered being at St. Mary's and speaking to Mr Taylor to say nothing about it, but said that it would be well to keep it quiet, so that we might perhaps find out who bought it.

ELIZABETH CAMPBELL, sworn—Was married to the late George Campbell's brother, and lived in the Township of Eldburgh; was acquainted with Phoebe after the marriage; there was considerable dissatisfaction between the old folks, which did not abate after the marriage; never heard them speak very favorable of her; they did not seem to like her; Coyle did not eat anything on the night of the murder; Mrs McWain pressed him to eat; the next morning at breakfast he did not eat anything, and Mrs McWain said to him that he must not fret; it is over now and cannot be helped.

London Exhibition.

The weather hitherto has been most propitious for this Exhibition and if it continues so to-morrow, doubtless there will be a large attendance to witness the reception of the Governor General, for whom extensive preparations of a loyal and enthusiastic character are being made. The number of entries is 7,038, of which upwards of 1300 comprise the various classes in horses, and 1,066 in fruits &c. We observe that the names of Exhibitors are not allowed to appear on the exhibits until after the prizes are awarded, a system it must be confessed that finds many strong advocates amongst exhibitors and the public generally in this district.

There are apparently not many Exhibitors from Guelph; Mr. F. W. Stone and Mr. Wm. Hood being amongst the principal exhibitors of breeding stock, and we see it stated that in the cattle classes a glance around the sheds was sufficient to show that in numbers, at least, there was no comparison between the show there and that at Hamilton; and was scarcely up to that at Guelph. Neither, with exceptions, were there so many animals of rare excellence on the ground; as a number of exhibitors of first-class stock were prominent by their absence. Mr. Peter Rennie, of Fergus, shows several of his fine fat cattle.
