can or box filled with refuse. One scheme that was suggested last night was that a bylaw be passed stating what manner of receptacle should be used for the reception of the garbage. The main question to be dealt with, however, will be the collection of the refuse, whether it shall be collected once a week or at shorter periods. The opinion of the members of the board of works is that a collection should be made daily in the central part of the city and at less frequent

To Provide Stations. Coles suggested that stations should be established in the outlying sections for the reception of the refuse, because perhaps a collecting wagon might be filled before the end of the route, and then it there were no stations the driver would have to take his load to the incinerator and then return to complete his duties, and so lose a considerable amount of time. If stations were made in the north, east and south parts of the city, and wagons with detachable boxes purchased, the driver, when his wagon was filled, could go to the station nearest him, remove the full box, and after replacing it with an empty one, could resume his route. At night the boxes could be removed from the stations either by a flat car operated on the street railway or by a large motor truck. As the boxes would be securely covered no agitation could be commenced by the residents in the neighborhood of the stations on account of the odor arising from the refuse.
