GOOD RESPONSE MADE TO NEW FEDERAL LOAN

Many Holders of Victory Bonds Take Advantage of Conversion Privilege.

Approximately $112,000,000 of the $172,000,000 Fielding national loan had been subscribed up until early this afternoon, local dealers stated.

The latter estimate roughly that about 60 per cent of the holders of the 1923 Victory bonds, maturing Nov. 1, have taken advantage of the conversion privileges, while the remaining 40 per cent have been straight cash purchases.

The 5-year bond has already been over-subscribed, being purchased mostly by Americans with funds in Canada. These are parties who say they are unable to get their money out of Canadian investments with any degree of satisfaction by reason of the premium on Canadian currency. They trust, however, that with the expiration of the new 5-year bonds the pre-war rate of exchange will have returned.

The 1923 issue is a non-taxable loan and with its elimination from the market only the following non-taxable bonds are left: the 1927, the 1931, the 1933, and the 1937.

All other issues, including the present one, are taxable.

FINDS STREET "ASKEW."

Ald. W. A. Wilson doesn't like the work on the Richmond street pavement near Hyman street. He related this morning that he had measured the street with a tape line and found that the west side of the street will be 18 inches wider than the right side. This should not be so, he declares, The track should be in the exact center of the street. He doesn't like the arrangement at all he says, insisting that his measurements are correct.

DROVE WITHOUT MARKERS.

Marshall Arnold, garage mechanic, admitted driving a car down Dundas to Richmond street without markers. He was surrised they wern't on the car, he told the police magistrate today. After further explanations, the case was dismissed on payment of $3 costs.

SUNDAY MEETING WAS NOT PROVEN TO BE CRAP GAME

Police Had Suspicions and $2.05 in Change, But Case Is Dismissed.

COUNSEL TAKES POT

What police maintained to be a crap game, but which John Anderson and six colored friends, plus three whites, insisted was merely a little Sunday morning gathering to raise funds to hire a motor car for a ride, provided more amusement in police court today than could be crammed into a Broadway hit. The case was finally dismissed.

The sum of $2.05 in small change which Sergeant Middaugh seized from Anderson last Sunday morning in a lane next to 103 Glenwood avenue was produced by Chief Birrell today, and rattled under the glittering eyes of the ten alleged culprits as the chief stalked by the "front line" to Magistrate Graydon's land.

Sergeant Middaugh told about the barrage the police had laid down and the subsequent charge of the police brigade on the colored stronghold.

Those whose names graced the police court blotter in connection with the case were Harry Anderson, Norman Mills, Arthur Moxley, Charles Smith, William Haywood, Harry Coursey, Alfred Johnston, Roy Anderson, Harry Fountain, John Anderson.

All the gang took to their heels and beat a masterful retreat, with the exception of Mr. Anderson, Arthur Moxley and Wm. Haywood.

Gathering the Loot.

When the sergeant bore down swiftly on the crowd from Hume street, Mr. Anderson, he stated, was down on his knees grabbing up the shekels from the turf. When he finally grabbed his hands, Mr. Anderson had all the money off the ground and told him with an ear to ear smile, "You didn't get the dice. I beat you before, and I'll do it again." And as events turned out Mr. Anderson scored a signal victory.

Mr. Anderson and his son, apparently did not believe the sergeant was to be trusted, for both insisted that he count the money not once but twice; this the sergeant did, the cash being locked away in the big police station safe.

Constable Pope, who was a member of the attacking squad, stated that he knew every member of the crowd, and although the heels flew too fast for him he recognized a lot of faces in the distance.

"Roy Anderson stated it was no use to take his name, because he wasn't in on it," declared the constable, smiling at friend Roy, "but we did just the same. Roy was sitting on a board, while the rest of the boys were sitting on their haunches when we first saw them. They grabbed for something, presumably dice, and ran.

A Regular Comedian.

"A great many hands grabbed for what you presumed were dice," said E. T. Essery, K.C., who was defending the "big ten." "You know, your worship," continued counsel, with one of his most brilliant smiles, "that John Anderson is quite a comical fellow. He is liable to say anything; he can't keep his mouth still."

This sally drew smiles of approval from even Mr. Anderson himself and someone whispered in a stage whisper, "That's right."

Evidence stated that Roy Anderson ran away while Harry stayed with Father John.

"We didn't charge them with 'rolling the bones because we didn't get them," reminded Sergeant Middaugh.

Constable Pope continuing his evidence said: 'Did you get the dice?'" continued the constable.

"Then there must have been dice there," deduced the chief.

"Oh, no. That's not fair," protested Mr. Essery with another smile. "You saw no gambling, did you?"

Saw No Gambling.

"No, sir," responded Constable Pope.

Constable Ayres who completed the police party, stated that he didn't see any gambling either.

" submit that there is no evidence," said Mr. Essery.

"What were they doing then?" demanded the court, thirsting for information.

Mr. Essery proceeded to slake this thirst with the informaton that his clients surely had a right to gather together on the Sabbath morning.

"They have no right to indulge in their national pastime," asserted Mr. Graydon, eyeing the crowd with a twinkle in both optics. "I'd like to hear Anderson's explanation.

"Mr. Anderson used to belong to a comic opera troupe and no doubt he will be able to tell you all about it," said Mr. Essery, and with this introduction, Mr. Anderson ambled to the witness box to tell the true story of just exactly what happened. Witness was garbed in a blue suit and as it was a warm day had discarded the conventioinal shirt and collar. He exposed to the gaze of the court a winter undershirt which was daintily fastened close to his throat with a large and shining safety pin.

Denied Gambling.

Mr. Anderson in stentorian tones denied that there had been any gambling "that day at that time." "I didn't say nothing about dice," protested witness. "That big sergeant there (pointing at Sergeant Middaugh) said, 'Give us the dice and there will be nothing of it.'"

"How was the money strewing the ground?" asked Chief Birrell.

"It wasn't," said Mr. Anderson. "They took it right out of my hands, the two of them. When they got out of their auto they grabbed it. The rest ran, and that's all there is to that. We were making up a pot to hire an auto, and a little longer and we would have had enough."

"You must have been going to hire a truck," observed the magistrate, running his eye over the line-up of ten.

"There's them as what didn't put in and they'd have to walk," proclaimed witness amid laughter.

"The last time you were here Mr. Essery had to decide who owned the money."

Counsel Gets the Pot.

"I'll have to decide again," submitted counsel. "If you will stay with me, your worship, I'll put the rest in the witness box."

"I won't stay that long," declined Mr. Graydon. "I'm embarrassed to know what to do with the money."

"I'm applying for it. It belongs to me as counsel," explained Mr. Essery, anxious to dispose of any doubts as to where the coin would eventually come to rest.

"You were'nt there, were you?" queried the magistrate, in tones that conveyed how shocked he was.

"I'm here this morning," reminded Mr. Essery, "and I'm working for them."

"All right," agreed the court, and Mr. Essery made a short, though courtly, bow as he accepted the envelope from Chief Birrell.

"They can now go back to work," proclaimed counsel, and the gang obediently started to file out of the courtroom.

"If they do work," corrected the magistrate, as the last coattail hurriedly vanished from view.

MERCURY SOARS AS SUMMER HEAT ENVELOPS CITY

Official Registrations Show the Temperature High as 88 Degrees.

FANS IN DEMAND

It was 88 yesterday in the shade at noon, and this morning at 8 o'clock the thermometer registered 68 and it kept on going up all the time, and at 2 o'clock it was 85.

"How's that for Indian summer?" said the man who had started the day in woolens, and who had made a special trip home to get back into his B. V. D.'s in order to preserve his equanimity. Londoners turned from the arm-swinging and finger-blowing exercises of last week to the good old hot weather pastime of mopping sweaty brows and wiping perspiry hat brims, the popular and customary behavior in June and July.

Fans were seen going in several offices and in many of the elevators that usually supremely cool gentleman who sits or stands as the case may be with the destiny of passengers in every little movement of the handle of the cage, was seen to be a trifle overcome, and to wipe a much-used handkerchief round his neck with the weary gesture of the utterly over-heated. Knights of the grip, lugging the "finest that's made" around to prospective customers blessed the weatherman, with a reservation that he might be a little less sudden in his changes of temperature. It was one of those days when feathers weighed like lead after the first few miles.

Everyone Slows Up.

"Oh well the first seven years is the worst," said one of them yesterday. "All a fellow has to do is to get out his old straw hat and go down to the lake. Only if you were to do that it would probably snow, so let's count our blessings one by one, and say nothing about it."

It was noticeable, too, that the autumn briskness that has been so flattering to London's climate for the last few weeks, ever since the fair in fact, was conspicuous by its absence.

There were no hurrying feet in London yesterday. Not a bit, they dragged and they plodded, and they just kept on in the direction their owner wanted them to go, but none of them hurried. Even the street cars seemed slower than usual, if such a thing were really possible.

One enterprising missionary of commerce, another knight of the grip, told the world in general that "the ancient mariner felt real snappy compared to the way I feel right now." He looked the part, certainly, and in any less civilized community his collar would have been a just reproof and a reminder of a hectic night before.

Ice Cream Sells Well.

Ice creams and cold, soft drinks came into their own. Open-work stockings appeared on the streets, and the clinging King Tut fashions in woolly things gave place to something suitable for a warmer and more changeable climate than the old Egyptian king ever dreamed of. Then there were mosquitos and flies and bugs all over the house when bedtime came, so in one way and another it was a day of inconsiderate unseasonableness, when Londoners wilted and perspired, when horses and dogs wagged a thirsty tongue, and when the weatherman ran up a record sheet that will have to be acby a few nice crisp winter days when mometer and when fur coats will come into their own as the prevailing fashion.

How does this hot spell compare with former years in London? The official records shaw the following dates and temperatures:

Sept. 1, 1915, temperature 90; Sept. 1, 1917, temperature 84; Sept. 1, 1918, temperature 80; Sept. 6, 1919, temperature 90; Sept. 12, 1920 temperature 84; Sept. 1, 1921 temperature 90;

So it seems that this is always a rather hot period in the old home town. It was 84 at 2:00 p.m today, and only the powers that be can say what tomorrow may bring.

MORE SCOTCH GIRLS COMING.

A party of ten girls brought over from Scotland by the immigration department of the Salvation Army will arrive in London next Monday. All of the girls will receive domestic positions in the city. The last party of boy immigrants from the Old Country arrived several weeks ago, and although Scotch girls will be coming out to this country until the end of November, and will be securing positions as domestics, there are no more farm positions for the boys until the commencement of the new year.

NO LAMP BRINGS FINE.

Rufus Johnston, a colored youth, admitted in police court today that he rode his bicycle along the street after dark without a light on it. "It's against the law and dangerous to you," declared Magistrate Graydon. "Two dollars and costs."

News From City Churches

S. S. RALLY.

Services next Sunday at the Robinson Memorial Methodist Church will be in the form of a Sunday school and young people's rally. Morning services will be as usual, but in the afternoon the Sunday school will assemble at three o'clock and there will be a special musical service and an address by Mr. A. R. Kennedy. In the evening the Epworth League will be in charge of the service and the sermon will be preached by Rev. R. Parnaby of Belmont.

S. S. ORGANIZATION.

The separate department system will be followed in the Knox Presbyterian Sunday School throughout the coming term. This arrangement was made and plans laid for the annual grading of classes, which takes place next Sunday, at an organization meeting of the Sunday School executive and teachers held last evening. At present the Sunday School is hampered by lack of accommodation, but it is expected that the new building will be completed within the next three weeks. The school will then be organized for the winter in classes of 30, each with one teacher. The classes will be subdivided, however, into three groups, each group having a leader. All vacancies in the executive and teaching staff have been filled and the officers are looking forward to a most successful winter.

"THE CREES" MEET.

"The Crees," one of the 'teen age boys' classes at Askin Street Methodist Sunday school last night commenced their season very auspiciously with a corn roast and the annual business meeting, in which the election of officers took place. The new executive will consist of the following: President, Harold Jackson; vice-president, Chester Hancock; secretary, Arthur White; treasurer, Sterling Young; convener of the social committee, Morris Scott; convener of membership committee, Archie Rogers; convener of sports committee, Gordon Bloomfield. C. R. Walker, superintendent of the Sunday school, presided at the election.

BALE FOR QU'APPELLE.

The Senior Girls' Auxiliary of Knox Presbyterian Church are making plans for a sale of homemade cooking to be held in the month of November. Details in connection with this were attended to at a meeting last night, and the girls also finished packing their bale for the Qu'Appelle Indian Reserve. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Dundas.

Miss Marjorie Grieve was appointed to fill the office of vice-president in place of Miss Evelyn Haylock, who is leaving shortly to become a medical missionary.

SOCIAL SERVICE CLUB.

Mrs. Ross Johnston was made president of the Social Service Club at a meeting held recently. Other officers elected were: Miss Vola McDonald, vice-president; Mrs. Sidney Horn, secretary; Mrs. Roy Gray, treasurer; press correspondent, Miss Joan Rowatt.

GIRLS REORGANIZE.

Organized during the war as the Senior Girls' Club, to be later disbanded and affiliated with the Young People's Society, a number of young women of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church have again formed themselves into an organization, and this time they are to be known as the Young Women's Missionary Auxiliary. Last Tuesday evening they met with the executive of the Women's Missionary Society in St. Andrew's Church parlors, and there commenced their organization for the winter. Miss Margaret McGill has been made president, and a nominating committee was appointed to prepare names for the other offices. At a meeting shortly these will be voted upon and plans for the winter's work outlined.

MEETING NIGHT ALTERED.

The Ladies' Aid of the Wortley Road Baptist Church meet this evening instead of next Tuesday, the date of the regular meeting having been changed. Tonight's meeting will be the form of the annual rally, with the president, Mrs. W. F. Black, in the chair.

CHRIST CHURCH GUILD.

The weekly meeting of the guild of Christ Church was held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Chauncey Smith, on Hill street, when plans were made for the bazaar, being held November 29, with Mrs. James Percy as general convener. Other conveners appointed were: Tearoom, Mrs. O. Thatcher, Mrs. (Canon) Gunne, Mrs. C. Trumper, Mrs. Hugh Tucker, and Mrs. Allway; home cooking, Mrs. G. McKenzie and Mrs. F. Smale; aprons, Miss A. Brown, Mrs. W. Thomas; candy, Mrs. F. McCrea and Mrs. George Gilmour; postoffice and fish pond, Mrs. James Percy and Mrs. Chauncey Smith. During the afternoon enjoyable piano selections were given by Miss Connor, and at the tea hour the hostess served tea, assisted by Mrs. Whale and Miss Drake.

FIRST BOYS' SUPPER.

The Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held their first weekly supper of the season last Tuesday evening. The boys were about 40 in number. Little business was transacted, and the election of officers did not take place, but the boys spent some time in discussing their plans for the winter, and outlining a plan of campaign. A committee of ladies served the supper. It was composed of the following: Mrs. W. R. Roome, Mrs. E. P. Smith, Miss Perkin, Mrs. J. A. McLaren and Mrs. Land.

PAYS $3 FINE.

Frank Johnston appeared in police court today, charged with using a cardboard marker on his car. He was warned by the magistrate and allowed to go on payment of the costs of $3.

1,000 Eggs In Every Hen

If You Keep Chickens, Cut This Out—Four to Seven Eggs a Week per Hen Through Cold Winter Season. High-Priced Eggs Means $5.00 Profit per Hen in Next Six Months. Amazing Poultry Secrets Revealed By AMERICA'S FOREMOST POULTRY EXPERT

This is an offer no reader of this paper who keeps chickens can afford to ignore. We will tell you why.

Henry Trafford, Famous Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of "Poultry Success," has developed a new and remarkable system of rearing, breeding and feeding chickens for heavy egg production that seems certain to revolutionize the poultry industry and give five eggs or more for every egg produced today. This plan or system is explaind in Mr. Trafford's "1,000-Egg Hen," a free copy of which will be sent to any person who keeps six hens or more.

Poultry keepers, following Mr. Trafford's directions, learn how to start young pullets laying early; make old hens moult quickly and resume heavy laying during entire winter season. Most any hen will lay in spring when eggs are cheap. Mr. Trafford tells how hens lay four to seven eggs a week during coldest winter days when eggs sell at a dollar a dozen or more. His system shows how any breeder, with ordinary care, may get 1,000 eggs or more from nearly every hen in four to six years' time at a net profit of $25.00.

There is big money to be made with chickens this winter by the man or woman who gets the eggs. The time to get the hens ready for heavy winter laying is now. Mr. Trafford's "1,000-Egg Hen" system tells how and arrangements have been made whereby any reader of this paper may receive one copy absolutely free by using the Coupon below. Send no money, but cut out the Coupon and mail it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, 470-B Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and the story of the 1,000 Egg Hen will be sent you by return mail.
