The people of Minneapolis have divided themselves into two factions on the Cardiff-Sullivan encounter. The majority think that Cardiff is entitled to the championship of America because, even on Sullivan's own showing, he injured his arm in the first round, and was therefore unable to fight Cardiff. It is further claimed that Cardiff drew first blood, which cannot be denied by anybody, and he was much the better man at the close of the sixth round, Minnle Minor, the noted brood mare, died Jan. 5 at the Oakwood Stud, near Orange, N.J., the property of Mr. F. C. O'Reilly, who purchased her at the Rancocas sale in October last for $100. She was a superior race mare, foaled in 1800 by the noted Lexington dam Julia. Minnle Minor produced a number of foals, the most famous of which were Warwick, Wyanoke, John Ledford, the great Wanda and Winfred. Minnle died from paralysis.

The Irish Sport thus speaks of the "unlucky" Foxhall: Foxhall's double victory in the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire is still fresh in the memory, and yet calemity seems to have attended all who were mixed up with the horse. One of his jockeys broke his neck, and another committed suicide. The owner is no longer a millionaire. The principal winner in the race is heavily in default, both for stakes and to the ring, and the commissioner who did the bulk of the business died in a lunatic asylum. Nor did any substantial benefit accrue to the trainer, who did his work so well.

Jos. Murphy's new play, "The Donagh," by George Fawcett Rowe, produced at Hooley's Theatre, Chicago, during Christmas week, proved a great success, it having been reconstructed and improved by Mr. Murphy since its last-production there, four years ago, and it may now be considered as one of the leading plays in his repertoire. It will be produced here shortly.

It is not at all surprising that the people of Toronto are partial to good tea and coffee, because the city can boast of enterprising merchants who are always on the market to buy the best goods produced by the Chinese and Hindoo planters. In this connection the teamporting house of Laut, 28 Yonge-street, is worthy of mention. Mr. Jas. Laut, the manager, is well known to the people of this province as a practical tea man, and his famous Secret Blend has obtained a wide reputation for purity and excellence.

for the Toronto Opera. House next week is "Across the Atlantic," which the American papers say is an exciting drama of great merit. It was written for Mr. John W. Ransone, the comedian who bears the burden of the play, assuming no less than four characters—an American cashier, a colored servant, a German guide and an Irish valet. A mechanical effect, a ship sailing out to sea, will be a chief feature.

Dear Sin: We are instructed to call your attention to the fact that under the agreement emisred into between the county and the city, the city is bound to complete the new Court House therein provided for hy Dec. 28 next

The county expected that the city would long since have commenced the erection of the Court House. It is now said that it will be impossible to complete the Court House by the time prescribed in the agreement, and the parties who are interested in the matter are threatening to take proceedings against the county in respect of the want of court house accommodation, and in the present position of matters it is impossible for the county to proceed with the work and provide any further accommodation.

Their hands are in fact field by the agreement with the city, and the city have done nothing in the way of providing any further accommodation.
