

The next want is that of a suitable building to be devoted to sacred purposes, there being, at present, nothing better than a log school-room, of very inadequate size, and, of course, utterly destitute of the decencies, not to say adornments, which befit the place where prayer is wont to be made. The want of room is felt at all times, but more especially at the period of the annual assemblage of Indians to the issue of presents at this place, when not one-half of those who would otherwise attend on the means of grace can be accommodated.

Of the want of books, which is the only other that I would mention at present, I have spoken above.

Praying that the Great Head of the Church may abundantly bless the labours of your benevolent Society for the spread of His Gospel in the world,

I am, &c.

FREDERICK A. O'MEARA.
