MR. EDITOR :

I would like to call the attention of your readers to the peculiar needs of one of our Mission Stations. The field referred to is one that should be well known in our Presbytery, and hence need not be described. Any one who has any interest in Home Missions will not need any introduction to Waterford, situated eight miles from Sussex. It is needless to repeat the history of this little mission station, which has been struggling for existence for years, and supplied only in the summer months by catechists.

At last, however, the people have decided to make an attempt to form this field into a congregation in the near future, having over it a settled pastor, and they have been highly encouraged in this undertaking by friends around them.

The people are now erecting a neat little church, and are subscribing most liberally for that purpose, as they have begun to realize that this is the first step that is necessary for their advancement.

Despite their earnest efforts some external aid will be needed in order that they may complete the building which is now under course of construction. I know it is only necessary to mention this fact to the different congregations in our Presbytery and they will be only too glad to send at least a small contribution to help on such a worthy scheme.

In time this field may be a self-supporting congregation, and if some help is rendered now, there will be no difficulty in having our hopes realized.

Any who may be anxious to contribute will please do so as soon as possible, forwarding their subscriptions to

To the Editors of Church and Home :

Sirs,—I was a little surprised to read in your last issue that I am "again" unable to attend to my duties through sickness. Permit me to say that I am, and have been for a long time, in excellent health; that during the last winter I got through more hard work than I did, in as many months, in all my life; and that, excepting a few days when I was induced to "nurse a cold," I never felt in better condition for work.

I am, etc.,

A. A. MacKENZIE.

With regard to the above note,
